Something to Crow About

An Anniversary Sale to Crow about.

Josh Billings Said :

"I luv the Rooster for two things—for the Crow that is in him, and for the Spurs that are on him to back up the crow with."

This homely opinion of the rooster will just about fit in with a few words we would like to say about this

GREAT ANNIVERSARY SALE

There are abundant reasons to "Crow" about it, because its the biggest thing of the kind ever attempted in Napanee, or any other town, in the Drug line. And it has long, sharp Spurs to back up the Crow with—the Spurs of invincible prices and unbeatable quality.

While this store is not given to blowing or crowing it is fit and proper that we should feel something akin to satisfaction with the way this great sale has grown, and the amount of money the purchasing public have saved.

WE HOPE EVERY-ONE GOT THEIR SHARE OF THIS GREAT SAVING.

And after you buy, the goods must be absolutely satisfactory or you don't need to keep them. That's the way to buy Drugs and Drug Store Goods. And this sale is more than half over—in fact there are only SHALL THE TOWN BUY THE MILL SITE.

The Electric Light Commissioners, in view of the great expense of producing electricity by steam are investigating all sources of power that may be available, such as "gas producer" plants, Hydro-Electric Commission, and water powers.

Among these is the proposition to purchase of the Napanee water power and gas plant. At an informal meeting of the Commissioners (except Mr. Miller who was in Toronto) the Mayor and Councillors, and a few citizens, at Dr. Ward's residence, after considerable discussion it was moved by Mr. W. C. Scott and seconded by Councillor Osborn that the Commissioners ask the owners of the Napanee water power and gas plant to submit their best price and full information as to property, in meeting, also that the commission should continue the investigation of other sources of power. The motion was unanimously carried.

Undoubtedly the cheapest source of power for the town's electric Light plant would be the water power now owned by The Cartwright Estate, and though the figures for the purchase of the same have not been made public, we understand that the price asked is about seventy thousand dollars. This price includes all the mills and mill sites south of Dundas street from the R. R. Bridge to Hoffman's corner, excepting the brick buildings extending from Hoffman's corner to Mr. Jas. Young's implement shop. At the price offered we understand the property would yield five per cent on the investment besides securing to the town the control of the water power, and a number of mill sites which could be offered to prospective manufacturers with cheap power for their factories.

In addition to this the Electric Light Commissioners could effect a very large saving on the running expenses of the Electric Light plant and at once convert it from an enterprise, which barely pays its way, to one which would show a handsome profit every year.

With the above site is also included the plant of the Napanee Gas Co., which though not in a very prosperous condition is paying its way and the town would have full control of the lighting services of the town.

It would be manifestly unfair to ask the Cartwright estate to sell the water privilege without also selling the gas plant as the town, with a very cheap source of power for Electricity could greatly injure the business of the Gas Co.

This is a matter which should be seriously considered by every ratepayer, and all information procurable should be laid before the ratepayers at an early date, so that the matter might be discussed in all its bearings. The columns of the Express will be open for the discussion of this project.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

The beautiful spring creations in hats, Blouses, Ladies Jackets, etc., shown at the Dooce Company's establishment, looked especially attractive Saturday upon the occasion of their Millinery opening. Palms and ferns were distributed throughout the store, along with pots of Hyacinths, and American beauty roses.

The Millinery department was a blaze of bright peculiar color. The prevailing shades are blues and Tans, the Copenhagen blue still being a decided favorite. Several tables contained hats of great charm; one fine creation called a Spanish Turban, made of black tulle and Mohair, with handsome band of cut Jet, finished with black Osprey. A blue Sailor, in merry widow style, was next examined covered with shantung silk, faced with braid, trimmed with roses and fancy banding, all in the blue shades. A Leghorn Hat attracted considerable attention. It was trimmed with lace over the crown and an agrette of American beauty roses in pastel shades. Some very pretty and choice things were shown in hats for children.

BROWN-ELLIOTT.

A very pretty wedding took place at nine o'clock on Wednesday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Brown, North Mill street, Deseronto, when her sister, Miss Francis Elliott, daughter of Thomas Elliott, Shancorn, County Caven, Ireland, was united in marriage to Robert Franklin Brown, third son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brown, Mill street, Rev. A. J. H. Strike was the officiating clergyman. The bride was given away by her brother-in-law, Edward Brown, and looked charming in a beautiful gown of cream silk colienne over white taffeta, with hand-made Battenberg lace, the latter having been presented to Miss Elliott by the late Mrs. W. H. Mellow, and the customary bridal veil and orange blossoms. She carried a sheaf of lovely cream roses. Her only ornament was the gift of the groom, a beautiful gold bracelet. Her bridesmaid was the groom's sister, Miss Ethel Brown, who looked charming in dotted white Swiss, with pink carnations. She also wore the groom's gift, a gold necklace set with amethysts. Arthur Brown, of Sudbury, ably performed the duties of best man, and carries a watch fob as a memento of the occasion. Little Marion Wales, of Napanee, niece of the groom, made a sweet ringbearer, the ring embedded in the heart of a white rose on a silver tray. Miss Flossie Lake as organist played Mendelssohn's wedding march in an effective manner. After the ceremony and congratulations, an excellent dinner was served to fifty guests, after which the usual toast list was gone through with. Palms, evergreens and carnations constituted the floral decorations. The presents to the bride were beautiful as well as useful. The happy couple left at 1 a.m. for a short trip, after which they will return for a few days before leaving for Sudbury, where they will reside. A reception was held at the residence of the groom's parents on Monday evening.

That languid, lifeless feeling that comes with spring and early summer, can be quickly changed to a feeling of buoyancy and energy by the judicious use of Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

The Restorative is a genuine tonic to tired, run-down nerves, and but a few doses is needed to satisfy the user that Dr. Shoop's Restorative is actually reaching that tired spot. The indoor life of winter nearly always leads to sluggish bowels, and to sluggish circulation in general. The customary lack of exercise and outdoor air ties up the liver, stagnates the kidneys, and oft-times weakens the Heart's action. Use Dr. Shoop's Restorative a few weeks and all will be changed. A few days test will tell you that you are using the right remedy. You will easily and surely note the change from day to day. Sold by—

Suddenly, in what seemed to be a quite deserted street, I left the kerb to cross the road alone, but ere I became aware of impending danger a man's voice shouted roughly, and I found myself thrown by violent concussion upon the roadway, struggling frantically beneath a horse's hoofs. I clutched wildly at air to save myself, but next second received a violent kick on the left side of the head, which caused sparks to appear before my sightless eyes, stunned me, and rendered me almost instantly insensible.

How long I remained ignorant of things about me it is impossible to tell. I fancy it must have been a good many hours. On my first return to consciousness I heard strange confused sounds about me, low whispering the words of which were utterly unintelligible to my unbalanced brain, and the quick rustling of silk. I remember wondering vaguely where I was. The blind quickly develop a habit of extreme caution, and with my senses dulled by the excruciating pain in my skull I lay reflecting without speaking. The throbbing in my head was frightful. When the recollections of my long walk which had ended so disastrously surged through my brain, it struck me that I must have been taken to a hospital after the accident, and that I had most probably remained there some days. Yet in hospitals there is no perfume of peau d'Espagne, nor do the nurses wear silken flounces.

I tried to catch the words uttered by those about me, but in vain. It may have been that they were spoken in some foreign tongue, or, what is much more likely, the terrible blow I had received from the horse's hoof had utterly disarranged my sense of hearing. This single thought appalled me. If my hearing had really been injured, then I was rendered absolutely helpless. To the blind the acoustic organs become so sharpened that they can detect sounds where those in full possession of sight and hearing can distinguish nothing. It is the ear that acts for the sightless eye. Therefore the fear that even this had failed me held me appalled.

I stretched forth my hand, and to my surprise felt that I was not in a hospital bed, as I had at first believed, but upon a silken couch, with my head resting upon a soft pillow. The covering of the couch was of rich brocade in wide stripes, while the woodwork had a smoothness which caused me to believe that it was gilt. I raised my hand to my head, and found it bandaged with a handkerchief and some apparently improvised compresses.

Although I opened my eyes, all was, of course, an utter blank before me. Yet I felt instinctively, as every blind person does, the presence of some one at my immediate vicinity, and presently after long reflection, I suddenly asked—

"Where am I? What has happened?" "You have been run over, and your head is injured," answered a strange harsh voice, hoarse and altogether curious. "But tell me. Your eyes have a curious look in them. Can't you see?" "No," I responded. "Unfortunately, I am totally blind."

"Blind!" gasped the voice, in appar-

It is a mere scalp-wound, therefore you may rest content, and congratulate yourself upon a very narrow escape."

"I congratulate myself upon falling into the hands of a friend," I said.

"Oh, it is really nothing!" exclaimed the voice of my unknown hostess with an educated accent. "In a few hours you will, no doubt, be all right. Rest, and in the morning the carriage shall take you home."

"Then it is not yet morning?" I inquired, vaguely wondering what hour it might be.

"No, not yet."

The response sounded afar off, and I felt somehow that my strength was suddenly failing me. A heavy, drowsy feeling crept over me, and my mind seemed filled with conflicting thoughts, until suddenly, and quite unconsciously, I fell asleep, the cool, soft, sympathetic hand still upon my brow.

When I awoke it was with a refreshed feeling. No one was, however, in my immediate vicinity. My kind protectress had left me, yet I heard voices in conversation in the adjoining room. The door communicating was closed, but there was the unmistakable pop of a champagne cork and a jingling of thin glasses that told of festivity. "In whose house, I wondered, was I a guest? Already I had inquired, but had been refused information.

Suddenly the voices were hushed, and I could distinguish a woman saying—"I tell you he's blind—stone-blind. If you doubt me, hold that before his face and see if he flinches."

A man's voice sounded in a low growl in response, then all was silent. Only the ticking of a clock somewhere near broke the stillness.

Whispers, like low, suspicious exchanges of confidence, soon afterwards reached my ears. The door had opened silently, and a few seconds later I felt the soft hand of my protectress again upon my forehead. My sightless eyes were wide open, and by that she, of course, knew that I was awake.

"Are you better after your sleep?" the well-cultivated voice inquired concernedly.

"Very much," I answered, raising myself upon my elbow. "But I have troubled you far too long, and will go, if you will kindly instruct your servant to call me a cab."

"Oh dear no," the voice answered pleasantly. "I couldn't think of allowing you to go home at this hour, and in your weak state, too. It would be madness. Continue your rest, and you will be quite right again in the morning."

"You are extremely kind," I protested, "but I really couldn't think of remaining longer."

"Would you like to repay me for what you so very generously term kindness?" she asked. "If so, I would only ask one little favor."

"Certainly. I will grant it if it lies within my power," I responded.

"Well, it is that you would scribble your name here, in this birthday book of mine. It will be a little souvenir of this evening."

"But I cannot write well now-a-days. I can't see, you know," I protested.

"But you can write your signature. If the handwriting is uneven I will forgive you, in the circumstances," the voice said merrily: and a moment later ed me, and in striving to extricate myself it slipped from the couch and slid to the ground.

I raised myself quickly, not knowing whether next moment I, too, might be struck down.

The faint sound of some one moving stealthily across the thick-pile carpet caused me to sit rigid, holding my breath. I heard the movement distinctly, and curiously enough it sounded as though it were a woman, for there was just a faint rustling as though her skirts trailed upon the ground. My quick ear told me that the person was approaching. By the panting breath I knew that it was the assassin.

Was I, too, to fall a victim?

I tried to call out, but in that moment of agony and horror my tongue refused to articulate. It seemed to cleave to the roof of my mouth.

The sound of movement ceased, and I knew that the person was quite close to me. My eyes were wide open, held fixed in expectant horror.

I felt a warm breath upon my cheeks, and knew that the unknown assassin was peering into my eyes. Next moment I had an instinctive feeling of something being held a few inches from my face.

In an instant the words that had been spoken by my protectress recurred to me. She had declared to her companions that I was blind, and urged them to test me by holding something to my head.

This was now being done. The truth of my statement was being proved, possibly by a revolver being held to my brow. If so, my only chance of safety rested in unflinching coolness. My position was certainly a most unenviable one.

For a few moments the panting heart of the assassin thumped close to me; then, apparently satisfied, the unknown person moved off in silence without uttering a single word.

My first impulse was to jump up and arrest the progress of the assassin, but on reflection I saw that to do so would only be to invite death. What could I do, blind as I was?

Only could I sit and listen, trying to distinguish every detail of the mystery.

Yes, I became convinced more than ever that the person leaving the room was not a man—but a woman.

Could it be the same individual whose cool, sympathetic hand had only a quarter of an hour before soothed my brow? The thought held me dumbfounded.

I had all along believed that the assassin had been a man, but it was certain by the swish of silken flounces that it was a woman.

As I listened I heard the click of an electric-light switch at the door of the room, and a couple of minutes later a heavy door closed. From the bang of the knocker I knew that the street-door had been shut by some person who had left the house.

I still sat listening. All was silent. Only the low ticking of the clock broke the dead stillness of the night. The mysterious woman who had thus made her exit had evidently switched off the light, leaving me in total darkness with the hideous evidences of her crime.

For some short time longer I listened my ears open to catch every sound, but hearing nothing, I now knew that I was alone. Therefore, rising to my feet, I groped about until my hands touched the prostrate body of the man, and as I did so he heaved a long sigh, and a quick shudder ran through his frame. The wound had evidently not caused instant death, but, placing my hand quickly over the heart, I found that it had now ceased its beating with the final spasm.

Slowly, and with utmost care, I passed both my hands over the dead man's face in order to obtain some mental picture of his appearance. His hair seemed thick and well parted at the side, his features those of a young man shaven save for the moustache, which was long and well trained. He was in evening clothes, and wore in his shirt a single stud, which, to my touch, seemed of very peculiar shape. I tried

DANGEROUS PURGATIVES

Many People Ruin Their Health Using Purgatives in Spring.

A spring medicine is an actual necessity. Nature demands it as an aid to carrying off the impurities that have accumulated in the blood during the winter months. Thousands of people recognizing the necessity of a spring medicine dose themselves with harsh, gripping purgatives. This is a serious mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicine weakens the system, but does not cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives weaken. The blood should be made rich, red and pure—purgatives cannot do this. What is needed in the spring is a tonic, and the best tonic medical science has yet devised is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of the medicine actually makes new rich red blood. This new blood strengthens every organ, every nerve; every part of the body. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills banish pimples and unsightly skin eruptions. That is why they cure headaches, backaches, rheumatism, neuralgia, general weakness and a host of other troubles that come from poor, watery blood. That is why men and women who use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills eat well, sleep well, and feel bright, active and strong. Mrs. Joseph Lepage, St. Jerome, Que., says: "My daughter suffered from headaches and dizziness. Her appetite was poor. She had no strength and could not study or do any work. She was thin and pale as a sheet. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking a couple of boxes we could see an improvement in her condition. She used the pills for some weeks longer, when they fully restored her health, and she is now enjoying the best health she ever did." Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring if you want to be healthy and strong. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GETTING THROUGH JAP LINES.

Chinese Spy Carried a Message From One Russian General to Another.

Chinese honesty is proverbial, but would seem to have its exceptions. The Rev. John H. K. De Forest, for thirty-five years resident in Japan and high in the confidence of Japanese statesmen and officials, told of an episode of which he had personal knowledge while with the army of Kuroki in Manchuria:

"Some of the spies used by both sides during the war were Chinese," he said. "Complications not infrequently resulted.

"Kuropatkin one day had a particularly important message to send to Gen. Stoessel. To get through the Japanese lines seemed almost out of the question, but the Russian commander went to a Chinese famous for his skill and intrepidity. The old fellow didn't want to risk it, but Kuropatkin cajoled him to it, giving him $300 and promising him $200 when he returned.

"When he reached the vicinity of the Japanese lines, with an intention that had evidently been with him from the start, he went straight to Kuroki, insisting that his business was very pressing.

"He explained in full to Kuroki that the Russian General had given him a task which he could not perform because of the admirable disposition of the Japanese forces, that therefore he had done the next best thing and come straight to the illustrious leader of the triumphant Japanese.

"Kuroki read the despatch, gave a asked—

"Where am I?—What has happened?"
"You have been run over, and your head is injured," answered a strange harsh voice, hoarse and altogether curious. "But tell me. Your eyes have a curious look in them. Can't you see?"
"No," I responded. "Unfortunately, I am totally blind."

"Blind!" gasped the voice, in apparent amazement. "Then that accounts for your accident!"

"But where am I?" I inquired eagerly. "You need not trouble, I assure you," answered the voice, pleasantly. "You are with friends."

"Then I am not in a hospital?"
"Certainly not. Having witnessed your accident, I am trying to do what little I can for you."

The voice, a man's, was low-pitched; and, further, it struck me as being disguised.

"May I not know the name of my good Samaritan?" I inquired.

"The name is entirely unnecessary," the voice responded. "From your card-case I see that your name is Heaton, and that you live in Essex Street Strand."

"Yes," I answered. It was evident, then, that whoever was this person who had taken compassion upon me in my helplessness, he had already been through my pockets.

"How long have you been blind?" the voice inquired, hoarse and deep. I knew that it was disguised by certain of the syllables being pronounced differently in various words. My hearing had fortunately returned to me again, and those who are blind are quick to detect any unusual sound, however slight it may be.

"For a year or more," I answered.

"And does your head still pain you very much?" inquired the voice, while at the same moment I felt a cool hand placed upon my throbbing brow.

In an instant I seized it by the wrist. The hand tried to wrench itself free, but not before I had felt the slimmest of the fingers, the rings upon them, and the softness of the palm.

It was a woman's. She had cleverly disguised her voice to cause me to believe that it was a man's. I placed my right hand upon her arm and felt it bare. Upon her wrist was a curious bracelet, thin but strangely pliable, evidently made of some ingeniously worked and twisted wire. I could not recollect ever having seen such a bangle upon a woman's wrist before.

The arm was bare; her skirts were of silk. My nurse was evidently in an evening toilette.

"Although I cannot see you, madam, I thank you for your kind attention," I said, a trifle piqued that she should have endeavored to mislead me by her voice.

She drew her hand away quickly, with a slight cry, as though annoyed by any discovery.

"I witnessed your accident," she explained simply, in a sweet, well-modulated voice, evidently her own. By her tone, she was no doubt young, and I wondered whether she was pretty. Truly this evening adventure of mine was a curious one.

"How did it happen? Tell me," I urged.

"You were crossing the road, and were knocked down by a cab. My doctor has already examined you, and says that you are not seriously hurt."

"Well, it is that you would scribble your name here, in this birthday book of mine. It will be a little souvenir of this evening."

"But I cannot write well now-a-days. I can't see, you know," I protested.

"But you can write your signature. If the handwriting is uneven I will forgive you, in the circumstances," the voice said merrily; and a moment later she placed a pen with a handle of ivory or pearl within my hand.

"What day of the month?" inquired the sweet voice.

"The second of July," I answered, laughing; and my unknown friend, having opened the book at that page, guided my hand to the paper, whereon I scrawled my name.

She took both pen and book, and by the departing swish of her skirts I knew that she had left me and had passed into the adjoining room.

A strange picture arose in my mind. Was she beautiful? At any rate her surroundings were elegant, and her low musical voice was that of a young and refined girl of twenty or so.

I listened, lying there helpless and sorely puzzled. Again curious whisperings in subdued tones sounded from beyond, but almost at that same moment some one commenced to play upon the piano Chopin's "Andante Spinto," which prevented me from distinguishing either the words uttered or the trend of the discussion.

For several minutes the sound of the piano filled the room, the touch, light and delicate, seeming to be that of a woman, when, of a sudden, there was a loud smashing of glass, and a woman's shrill, piercing scream rang out, accompanied by the sound of some heavy object as it fell to the floor.

In an instant the music ceased, and at the same moment I heard a man's voice cry wildly—

"Good God! You've—why you've killed her."

Next second there sounded a rapid scuffling of feet, a chair was overturned and broken, and from the quick panting and muttered ejaculations it seemed as though two persons were closed in deadly embrace. In their frantic, desperate struggle they advanced into the room where I was, and I still utterly helpless, with only a dark void about me, raised myself in horror and alarm. The man's words held me appalled.

Some terrible tragedy had occurred. My kind protectress had been murdered.

The other two persons, whoever they were, fought fiercely quite close to me, and I could distinctly detect from the vain efforts to shout made by the weaker that the stronger held him by the throat, and was endeavoring to strangle him.

Of a sudden there was a quick, dull thud, the unmistakable sound of a heavy blow, followed by a short agonized cry.

"Ah-h!" shrieked the voice of the person struck; and at the same instant a great weight fell back inertly upon me as I was lying, nearly crushing the breath from me.

I passed my sensitive hands over it quickly. It was the body of a man. Blood ran warm over my fingers.

He had been stabbed to the heart.

CHAPTER III.

The weight of the inert body oppressed both my hands over the dead man's face in order to obtain some mental picture of his appearance. His hair seemed thick and well parted at the side, his features those of a young man shaven save for the moustache, which was long and well trained. He was in evening clothes, and wore in his shirt a single stud, which, to my touch, seemed of very peculiar shape. I tried to make out its design, but in vain, when suddenly I remembered that if I took it, it might afterwards give me some clue to its dead owner's identity. So I took it from the stiff shirt-front and placed it in the pocket of my vest.

His watch-chain was an ordinary curb, I found, with a watch which had the greasy feel of silver. In his pockets were a couple of sovereigns and some loose silver, but no letters nor card-case, nothing indeed to lead me to a knowledge of who he really was. In one pocket I found a small pencil-case, and this I also took for my own purposes.

Half a dozen times I placed my hand upon his heart, whence the blood was slowly cozing, but there was no movement. The blow had been aimed with such terrible precision that he had been struck down ere he could utter a single word.

My investigations showed that he was about twenty-eight years of age; probably fair, by the softness of the hair and moustache, with even teeth, rather sharp jaw-bones and cheeks a trifle thin. Having ascertained this much, I groped forward with both hands in the direction of the room wherein the woman had been so swiftly done to death. It was in darkness, I have no doubt, but to me darkness was of no account, for I was ever in eternal gloom. The furniture over which I stumbled here and there was covered with silk brocade, the woodwork being of that smoothness which had led me to believe that it must be gilded. It was without doubt a fine spacious drawing-room where I had been lying, for the dimensions of the place were quite unusual, and the objects with which my hands came into contact were always of a character magnificent, and in keeping with the grandeur of the place. The house was evidently one of those fine mansions with which the West End of London abounds, and certainly this apartment, even though I could not see it, was the acme of comfort and luxury.

PET ANIMALS IN WILLS.

Fortune to "My Red Horse"—Parrot Bequeathed to Queen Victoria.

A. T. Newbold, the Salford (England) brewer, who has left his greyhound, Wildfire II., an annuity of £25, is one of many recent testators who have remembered their pet animals in their wills, says the Westminster.

A farmer near Tonlouse who died a short time ago left his entire estate to "my red horse," one John Spooner of Chicago bequeathed £100 to his dog "in recognition of his sympathy and tender nursing when I was seriously ill," and the will of a Mr. Garland contained this clause, "I bequeath to my monkey Jacko the sum of £100 per annum, and to my faithful dog Shock and my well beloved cat Tib a pension of five pounds."

A good many years ago an old lady bequeathed her pet parrot to Queen Victoria with 100 guineas a year for its keep, on the amusing condition that "her Majesty publicly exhibits it before her court twice a year to prove that the person entrusted with its care has not wrung its neck."

How happy women would be if they could live long without getting old!

"He explained in full to Kuroki that the Russian General had given him a task which he could not perform because of the admirable disposition of the Japanese forces, that therefore he had done the next best thing and come straight to the illustrious leader of the triumphant Japanese.

"Kuroki read the despatch, gave it back to him, bade him go on to Stoesel with it and return with the answer to the Japanese camp, where he would receive $500 and be permitted to carry the answer on to Kuropatkin and collect his remaining $200. The Chinaman carried out his instructions in detail and collected for his exploit $1,000."

ASKED TO BE BURIED ALIVE.

Mode of Death Selected by a Chinaman Condemned for Fratricide.

Rough justice as it is administered in most parts of China is sometimes tempered by individual tastes, as an incident printed in one of the China port journals attests. A man in Suchien, condemned to die, preferred to be buried alive, and his wishes were carried out to the letter.

During the famine two brothers who lived in Suchien fought desperately to stave off starvation from their families and bad blood arose between them. At last the elder brother sold his father's coffin for food. When he refused to divide the proceeds with his younger brother the latter cut off his head with a cleaver.

Because it was too expensive to carry the murderer several scores of miles to the nearest yamen of justice, the local elders, including the father of the murderer whose coffin had been sold, sat in justice upon the culprit and condemned him to death. He asked that he be buried alive instead of receiving the horrible torture of the "thirty flogs." The father interceded with the other elders to get them to grant his son's request.

A grave was dug, and the victim, with his arms and feet securely bound, was trundled in a wheelbarrow to the edge of the pit by his wife. There upon the murderer's own request his bonds were loosed and he walked to the grave, lowered himself into it and was ready.

The victim's wife put a felt hat over his mouth at his request, and then she helped the elders to fill in the grave with six feet of earth.

CHILDHOOD INDIGESTION MEANS SICKLY BABIES

The baby who suffers from indigestion is simply starving to death. It loses all desire for food and the little it does take does it no good; the child is peevish, cross and restless, and the mother feels worn out in caring for it. Baby's Own Tablets always cure indigestion, and make the child sleep healthy and naturally. Mrs. Geo. Howell, Sandy Beach, Que., says: "My baby suffered from indigestion, colic and vomiting, and cried day and night, but after giving him Baby's Own Tablets the trouble disappeared and he is now a healthy child." The Tablets will cure all the minor ailments of babyhood and childhood. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DIVING FOR FISH.

Method Employed by Native Fishermen in an India Stream.

A unique method of fishing is employed by natives along the Panlaung River in India.

Two dugout boats are employed about thirty feet long, with two men with long poles, one in the bow, the other at the stern punting the boat along. They stretch a long rope made of bamboos and plaited grass about a hundred yards long and weighted about every ten yards with big stones. This they let down into the water, and the fish are frightened toward the bank. The divers then jump in three at a time, remaining down about twenty seconds.

They carry gaffs about eighteen inches long and fishhooks with cords attached. When they strike a fish they let go the gaff and the fish is hauled up in the boat. A big fire is lighted on the river bank, and the men warm themselves before it when not diving.

A SAFE INVESTMENT.

For some months men of means have been sitting tight. No wealth for safe investment. At this time of the year there comes the natural rebound. Moneyed men want some place to invest their money where they will get a larger interest than the banks pay and yet have an absolute surety that it will not be sunk out of sight with no return. To meet this condition one of the best companies in the city are offering preferred stock in their concern and guarantee an 8 per cent. accumulative dividend payable each year. They will retain the privilege of buying out the investor of the stock he has purchased at the expiration of three years, by giving him an advance of 10 per cent. on the par value of his shares plus the 8 per cent. guaranteed dividend.

MOBILIZATION AT QUEBEC

Twenty-five Thousand Troops May Be Concentrated

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Militia Department expects to be able to make definite announcement shortly as to the plans for the mobilization of a Canadian army of some twenty-five thousand men at Quebec in July next on the occasion of the Champlain tercentenary. Negotiations with transportation companies are still being carried on relative to carrying the troops to and from Quebec, and arrangements for looking after the commissariat department are still under consideration. Pending definite information on these two most important aspects of the undertaking, the Militia Council will not be able to state definitely just what will be the extent of the proposed mobilization. So far, however, the plans are working out satisfactorily.

In the event of the feasibility of the scheme as at present contemplated being assured there will be no annual militia camps east of Manitoba this summer. It is proposed that sixty per cent. of all the corps, both city and rural, from Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces shall mobilize at Quebec during the last week of July. The selection of those who are to go will be decided on later, but it is the intention to have only members of the militia well qualified to take part in military manoeuvres by reason of considerable previous training.

Armenians Undertake to Discipline a Fellow-Worker

A despatch from St. Catharines says: A very strange case was on Wednesday reported from the Armenian colony at the McKinnon Dash Metal Works. A young Armenian of eighteen years, who was brought to the works from Hamilton two years ago, was taken ill recently and has since been off work. He refuses to join his fellows at work or play, sits by himself in a corner of the general sitting-room and cannot be persuaded to enter into conversation. He also refuses to partake of meals, and his comrades have been under the necessity of forcing him to take food enough to sustain life. Acting on the belief that the young man has been shamming, the men who are housed with him dragged him to the table on Tuesday night and forced him to partake of food. According to the story told by one of the Armenians, the young man then, failing to reply to questions, was seized and carried to the Niagara, St. Catharines & Toronto Railway, where he was tied to the track, but was rescued soon after by other Armenians. Sergt. McCarthy investigated the case, but could get no information against anyone, and was of the opinion that the man was not ill at all.

YOUNG FOLKS

A MAGIC GARDEN.

Gertrude and Fannie played on one side of the fence, and Jessie and Alice on the other side. It was a picket fence, and so they could look through it and talk to each other between the pickets.

Jessie and Alice had a set of paper dolls that came from the city. They were beautiful dolls, with dresses and hats which could be taken off and put on. One dress made the doll look like an English girl holding a flag, and another like an Irish girl, and the Irish girl had the cunningest fat pig under her arm. Then there was a dress that turned the same doll into an Indian, and still another which made her a Dutch girl with wooden shoes, and a basket on her arm. Gertrude and Fannie's dolls were cut from magazines, and their dresses were some the girls had made from tissue-paper, and gold lace which the grocer had taken off a raisin-box and given them.

Gertrude and Fannie liked their dolls very much, and they had lots of fun making clothes for them, but they thought they never had seen any quite so nice as Jessie and Alice's. They all played happily together, but Gertrude and Fannie longed for something that should be as wonderful as the dolls.

"They always have nicer things than we do," said Gertrude one day.

"Yes," answered Fannie. "And they have such a smart kitten! Jessie said that this morning, when they would not let it in, it climbed up on the outside of the screen door and opened the top with its paw, and squeezed through, and then climbed down on the inside. That was pretty smart, I think, but our Puff can sit up on her hind legs and beg, and there are not many cats that will do that."

"No, indeed!" answered Gertrude. "But I wish," she added, "that we could have something that would just snake them open their eyes," and she made her own so big as she said it that Fannie was almost startled.

"I just wish we could astonish them." They were not jealous or cross over the matter, but they did love to surprise people.

It was not long after this that Gertrude and Fannie received a letter from a cousin who lived several miles away. "I have been having such fun," she wrote, "surprising people with magic flowers."

Gertrude and Fannie put their heads very close together at this, to read what followed, and then they clapped their hands.

"Just the thing!" exclaimed Gertrude. "Now we will have something to show Jessie and Alice, and won't they wonder about it!"

So they set out to gather a bunch of the violets which were to be found growing in abundance in a marshy field which they knew well.

About an hour later they ran out to the picket fence and called to Jessie and Alice.

"Wouldn't you like a bunch of violets?" asked Gertrude, handing a few through the fence.

"Why, yes," answered Jessie, in a somewhat surprised tone; and then she stopped in greater surprise, for the blossoms which Gertrude handed her were a beautiful shade of green.

"Why," she exclaimed, "I never saw green violets before! Where did you get them?"

"Oh, out in the field," answered Fannie, quite as if green violets were a matter of course.

"Why! why!" ejaculated Jessie, with her eyes opened wide enough to suit even Gertrude; and that was all she seemed able to say.

"They are magic violets," Gertrude answered, in a superior sort of tone.

LIVE STOCK MARKET.

Toronto, March 31.—Choice cattle continue very scarce, and while the general quality of to-day's market was fair, there was no really choice animals.

What exporters were offered brought prices ranging from $4.75 to $5.35, and export bulls, $3.90 to $4.40.

As much as $5.25 was paid for picked butchers' which last week would not have sold for more than $4.75, and straight loads of choice were bought for $4.50 to $4.90. Steers of medium quality brought prices which would have been paid for choice steers last week, and it was only the very poorest stock. Good cows were equally sought after, and proportionately high prices were paid for them.

A good demand and small offerings of veal calves caused slightly higher prices to be paid for the best quality.
Prices of sheep and lambs were firm, but not materially higher. Spring lambs were offered in limited numbers, and sold up to $7.50 each.

The market for hogs is stronger, and 5½c per pound was paid for selects.

BOMB KILLS TWO PERSONS.

Was Hurlled at a Squad of New York Police.

A despatch from New York says: A determined effort to hold a Socialist meeting in Union Square, despite the fact that no permit had been obtained and in defiance of the orders of the police, ended in the explosion of a bomb in the middle of Union Square Park
Saturday afternoon, by which one man, Ignatz Hildebrand, a tailor, was instantly blown to death and the man who held the bomb was so badly injured that the hospital surgeons say he is certain to die. The man who held the bomb and who was about to hurl it at a squad of policemen when it exploded, had his right hand blown off just above the wrist and both of his eyes were blown out. Despite his terrible injuries, he was occasionally conscious in the course of the afternoon and evening, and he told both the police and the coroner who took his antemo-rtem statement that he had intended to throw the bomb at the police. The bomb-thrower is Selig Silverstein, a young Jewish tailor.

nie, quite as if green violets were a matter of course.

"Why! why!" ejaculated Jessie, with her eyes opened wide enough to suit even Gertrude; and that was all she seemed able to say.

"They are magic violets," Gertrude answered, in a superior sort of tone; and before Jessie and Alice could ask any more questions they had turned and run back to the house. In the afternoon they appeared at the fence again and called, and this time Fannie gave Jessie and Alice each a cluster of lilac blossoms, and each cluster was shaded from the usual purple near the stem to a delicate green at the tip, while Gertrude gave them each a spray of yellow lilies-of-the-valley.

"We have started a magic garden," said Fannie, in answer to the questions and exclamations of wonder.

"Please do tell us about it!" coaxed
Alice. But Gertrude only answered,
"Oh, that is a secret."

The girls showed their magic blossoms in the house, too, and their Aunt Edith thought the lilacs so beautiful and so wonderful that she asked for a bunch to wear. "Isn't it nice," said Gertrude, with an emphatic shake of her head,
"to have something that Jessie and Alice wonder about?"

On the other side of the fence Jessie and Alice were talking earnestly. And then they called to Gertrude and Fannie.

"We'll let you keep our paper dolls all day if you'll tell us about your magic garden," they said.

Gertrude and Fannie looked at each other's eyes a moment, and then they turned and answered, "All right."

The paper dolls were brought, and as they were handed through the fence, Gertrude said, "We just dip the blossoms in ammonia. You can see the color change. Our cousin wrote about it, and we thought it would be such fun."

But almost before they had finished, Jessie and Alice were running toward the house, to start a magic garden of their own.—Youth's Companion.

ITALIANS' BLOODY FIGHT.

Second Outbreak of a Week Among Foreign Element in Toronto.

A despatch from Toronto says: The Italian quarter on Claremont street, Toronto, was the scene of a bloody stabbing affray on Saturday night, which marks the second outbreak of lawlessness among the foreign element in the west end within a week. One Italian threw a piece of concrete at another and took to his heels. The man who was struck accused a third man. One drew a razor and the other a knife. The results follow:—Vincenzo Guzzi, 265
Claremont street, is in Grace Hospital, with his face, head and body a mass of wounds and slashes which required
70 stitches to close. Francesco Appa, 106 Claremont street, is in the Western Hospital, with two wounds from ear to ear across the back of the head. His thumb was nearly cut off and he has a long cut in the back, inflicted by a razor. It took 47 stitches to close his wounds. Domenico Colosimo, 106 Claremont street, was arrested for throwing the stone.

A despatch from Hanna, Wyoming, miners killed in two explosions which occurred in Mine No. 1 of the Union Pacific Coal Company on Saturday, have been recovered. All hopes of rescuing any of the sixty odd men entombed has been abandoned, for the condition of the bodies of those recovered indicated that their companions were killed outright. Seventy coffins have been or-of the dead have been obtained. The

MEXICAN CITY WIPED OUT

Over One Hundred Inhabitants of Chilapa, Lose Their Lives By Earthquake.

A despatch from City of Mexico says:
Chilapa, a town in the State of Guerrero, was practically wiped off the earth on Thursday night by an earthquake and fire which followed. How many of the 15,000 souls who live in the place lost their lives is not definitely known as yet. But the loss of life is estimated at between 100 and 200. The number of injured is estimated at 2,000.

Cosatepel, Concepcion and Tetitilla, three towns, with an aggregate population of about 2,500, in Guerrero State, were also wiped off the map during the night. No report is made of the damage, but many were injured.

The centre of the disturbance seems to have been in the State of Guerrero, where great damage was done in the small mountain towns. The upheaval prostrated the telegraph wires in some parts of the region south of here, and the full extent of the damage and possible loss of life by the earthquake cannot yet be learned.

Chilapa is 115 miles from Mexico City, and all communications have been cut off, except for couriers, who are reported to be on the way to Mexico City from the stricken district. The only information so far received is that the entire city is a mass of flames and cannot be saved.

Chilapa is situated high in the mountains on the Inter-Oceanic Railroad, which is being built to Vera Cruz. The countryside is barren for the most part, and extremely broken. The Sierra Madre del Sur Mountains extend through the entire State of Guerrero parallel with the coast, and the country is broken by numerous spurs running inland.

In the valleys there is some agricultural land, and on the high ground considerable land is under cultivation, cernilla and cotton being the principal products. Owing to the sparsity of the population few agricultural industries are carried on.

MONEY PARCEL QUICKLY STOLEN.

Express Agent at Collingwood Robbed at Station.

A despatch from Collingwood says: The boldest robbery that ever occurred in Collingwood was perpetrated on Thursday at noon at the G. T. R. station here, when the Canadian Express Company was robbed of a parcel containing one thousand dollars in one dollar bills. The parcel was addressed to the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, and had been shipped by the Receiver-General's office in Toronto. It was received by the agent of the express company, Mr. L. E. Wright, from the messenger on the train. Upon receiving the parcel Mr. Wright placed it upon the truck with other parcels, and engaged in other duties, which at the time are rushed, more especially when the train is late as was the case on Thursday. He lost sight of it but for a moment, but when he turned his attention to it it was gone, and since no trace of it has been found. The police were notified, but up to six o'clock on Thursday night they have failed to secure the thief, although several clues have been followed up. The parcel was made up in the usual way. It is thought the party who took the parcel must have been watching Mr. Wright very closely, as the time was so very short between its reception from the messenger on the train and its disappearance. Several men were standing around, but all profess to know nothing. The loss of the parcel will fall on the local agent, Mr. Wright.

Five-Year-Old Burned to Death Near Huntsville.

A despatch from Huntsville says: Viola Fletcher, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. W. J. Fletcher, who lives at Ravenscliffe, six miles from Huntsville, died on Thursday morning, the victim of a distressing accident that occurred about 5 o'clock on Wednesday night. The father was absent from home, and the mother had gone to the barn to milk the cows. She left her two little daughters, Viola, aged five, and Mary, aged three, in the house. But a few minutes after she left the older girl ran screaming to her mother with her clothing on fire. The frenzied parent carried her back to the house, and exhausted every effort to extinguish the flames and relieve the child's suffer-

HEALTH

EXERCISE FOR THE BABY.

In considering the question of physical exercise for very small infants, it is comfortable to remember that Nature herself is quite capable of taking care of this matter, unless she is stupidly balked by the child's other and less able guardians. Any one who doubts this statement has never had the privilege of watching a tiny but healthy baby grow and kick when its restricting clothes are removed. This habit should be fostered by parents, as the baby will never overdo it.

It is not necessary to hang over it all the time, as so many parents do, talking and laughing and overstimulating the tiny brain at the same time. A few minutes of this each day will do no harm, but then self-control should be exercised, and the child left to its own devices.

It should be laid down on a soft rug or mattress, in the winter near the open fire, in the summer near an open, sunny window, with its clothing removed, and allowed to kick and wave and gesticulate and indulge in its funny monologue as long as it will. Nature, as we said before, is then its nurse, and a wise one.

Its lungs and muscles are all getting their proper exercise, its skin is being healthily ventilated, the hardening process is being softly done as it should be, and the baby is gay and happy without stimulation and excitement—also as it should be.

As to the exercise part of the proceeding, the looker-on might almost think that the baby had made an exhaustive study of some excellent system of muscle development, so vigorous are its movements and so suited to their design.

When the time comes for the child to "find its legs," as the old nurses say, it is quite unnecessary to aid it in the search. Its legs are in place, and have had plenty of good, free exercise; and when they are strong enough to support the little body, the baby will pull itself up by a chair or other piece of furniture, turn with that irresistible air of mingled conceit and rapture to see if some one is looking at it, gurgling its satisfaction with this new state of things, and the deed is done.

From that day continual fresh progress will be made, at first with support, later in a staggering run, ending, to its great surprise, in a backward bump, and a new phase of life is begun.

In spite of good advice, there are still to be found in the world foolish and adoring young parents whose baby walked and talked and thought earlier than all other babies. The result, so far as walking is concerned, is very likely to be a well-developed case of bow-legs.—Youth's Companion.

HEADACHE FROM EYESTRAIN.

Basing himself on his records of nearly 1,300 eye examinations, Dr. S. W. S. Toms claims that 90 per cent. of all those suffering from reflex or neuralgic headache have ocular defects.

Over 600 of the patients examined were altogether unaware of the defect. Fully half the cases were of only slight refractive errors or muscular unbalance, and it is in these cases in which ciliary spasm is the direct factor in causing headache in persons whose occupation calls for near vision that accommodative asthenopia results.

There is no apparent relation between the severity of the headache and the degree of the ocular defect, and nothing especially characteristic, except perhaps the patient's non-suspicion of the cause. Sickness or health impairment may be the first inciting factor in some patient with considerable ocular defects which gave no trouble before.

PEOPLE WANT GOOD ROADS

System of Improving Highways Spreading in Ontario

Mr. A. W. Campbell, Deputy Minister of Public Works, in an address delivered before a meeting of the Good Roads Association of Ontario, held in Toronto the other day, strongly advocated the building of bridges in the most substantial style by means of cement or concrete. If this is carried out the Government will be glad to contribute one-third of the cost. Mr. Campbell laid stress on the fact that the County Councils should strive to familiarize themselves with the financial conditions of the county and the expenses in connection with repairing the roads. In making small repairs in the roads he pointed out that the expenditure amounted to practically as much as if more substantial roads were built. In the last ten years the municipalities had contributed about $10,000,000 cash in the improving of their roads. He said that this money, if properly handled, would be sufficient to construct roadways that would last for at least a period of ten years. He believed that if the County Councils would take over this work and avail themselves of the provisions of the act the Township Councils would be ready to offer their assistance in the work of making good roads.

"It is surprising," continued Mr. Campbell, "how contagious this thing is after the work of improving a road has commenced. It is not wise, however, to attempt to do too much, it being much wiser to adopt the policy of do a little and do it well. This tends to convert the people to advocate an extension of the good roads system in municipalities where it does not exist. It is not the long mileage that counts, but the sample of the good work done that impresses the people who will ultimately conclude that a standard road shall be a policy in all districts. The work was done well and economically in compliance with certain regulations of the act relative to Government inspection. If counties do not adhere to this rule the Government will not pay its one-third of the expenditure."

A ROBBER'S CONFESSION

Shooting of Pierre Delorme Near Montreal Explained

A despatch from Montreal says: The police in this city were notified on Wednesday night that a man named William Sangster gave himself up in New York and had confessed to a crime committed near Montreal several months ago. He stated that, with two other men, named Peter Upson and Joe Lamereke, he had attacked a young man named Pierre Delorme, and had shot Delorme when he refused to give up his money.

The crime to which he confessed was committed on October 26. Pierre Delorme, a young farmer, was returning from the market in the early evening. The highwaymen jumped up and demanded money. When Delorme offered resistance he was shot twice, one bullet entering behind the right ear. The noise of the shooting frightened his horses, and they ran away and were later stopped by the parents of the unfortunate young man. He was found in the bottom of the wagon, bleeding profusely, and barely conscious. He was taken back to Montreal, but died shortly after. Before dying he told of the attack on him by three robbers.

The confession of Sangster has cleared up the mystery, and he will be brought here to stand his trial. His two associates are already in prison, having been sentenced some time ago for burglary.

"BLACK HAND" BUSY IN MONTREAL.

The Wife of Senator Forget Was Repeatedly Threatened.

A despatch from Montreal says: Members of the "Black Hand" are getting bold in their operations. For some time past Madame L. J. Forget, wife of Senator Forget, has been receiving letters suggesting that the "Black Hand" required the sum of $2,000, and that if the payment were not promptly made death would follow. The case was immediately placed in the hands of detectives, with the result that a man, who is known as Ivo Edraro, an Italian, has been arrested. Decoy letters had been sent to Edraro, and he was arrested as a result of the work of the detectives. Edraro appeared before Judge Choquet on Wednesday and was charged with sending threatening letters, demanding the sum of $2,000 on pain of death. The accused pleaded not guilty and was remanded for enquete. The penalty for the offence charged is 14 years' imprisonment.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Unaccountable Crime of a Butcher at Parrsboro, N. S.

A despatch from Halifax, N. S., says: News reached Amherst at 1 p. m. on Thursday of a terrible tragedy at Parrsboro, Cumberland county. At noon a prominent young man, named Lewis K. Smith, who conducts a butcher shop in Parrsboro, was working as usual in his shop, when James Rector, another young man, entered and made the remark: "Smith, you are not looking well this morning." Smith immediately drew a revolver from his pocket, and, without saying a word, fired point blank at Rector, the bullet entering the breast near the right lung. He then turned the weapon on himself and fired a shot in his mouth. Rector lived only five minutes. Smith is still alive, but cannot recover.

mother had gone to the barn to milk the cows. She left her two little daughters, Viola, aged five, and Mary, aged three, in the house. But a few minutes after she left the older girl ran screaming to her mother with her clothing on fire. The frenzied parent carried her back to the house, and exhausted every effort to extinguish the flames and relieve the child's sufferings, but the little body was so terribly burned that death followed an hour later.

PRISON WORSE THAN DEATH.

Seven Chinese Traitors Sentenced to Long Terms.

A despatch from Peking says: Seven men arrested recently, charged with trafficking in Governmental secrets, have been found guilty and sentenced to long terms of imprisonment. This punishment is generally considered to be worse than death. Natung and Liang Tun Yen, members of the Foreign Board, were on the court that handed down the sentences. The conspiracy against the Government is fairly widespread and the revelations within the last few days have considerably alarmed the Court and the Administration. No less than thirty important prisoners are now being held in custody, and it is reported that the Chief of Police of the Forbidden City is among this number. Certain men at present in the Government service are thought to be acting as spies against the dynasty as well as trafficking in State secrets, and other arrests are expected.

VACCINES THROUGH MOUTH.

Satisfactory Immunization Against Tuberculosis Thus Secured.

A despatch from London says: Dr. Latham, of St. George's Hospital, read a preliminary paper before the Royal Society of Medicine on Wednesday, tending to show that satisfactory immunization against tuberculosis could be obtained by administering vaccines through the mouth instead of injecting them into the blood. He described cases in which he cured glandular tuberculosis and markedly improved pulmonary tuberculosis. Dr. Latham's system is based on the original recommendation of Prof. Koch, modified by Prof. Wright's work on the opsonic index.

MACHINE BLEW UP IN CELLAR.

Hotel Building in New Brunswick Town Wrecked.

A despatch from McAdam, N. B., says: The north wall of the Hotel City Camp was moved about eight inches, the dining-room completely demolished, and every window in the house blown out by an explosion of an acetylene gas machine in the hotel basement on Wednesday evening. The clerk of the hotel was in the basement at the time, and received serious injuries, being thrown ten feet. Mrs. Meredith, wife of the proprietor, is very ill as a result of the shock. Several guests in the dining-room at the time escaped serious injuries.

TRADING STAMPS WITH COFFINS.

Competition Gone Mad Among Undertakers in Chicago.

A despatch from Chicago says: "Trading stamps with every funeral" is the placard that one may expect to see soon in the windows of up-to-date Chicago undertakers. That two or three funeral directors on the north side of the city have adopted the trading stamp system to increase business was revealed on Tuesday when a bereaved widow cancelled an order at a downtown undertaker's because he would not give her some stamps. Friends of hers, she said, who recently had deaths in their families, were given trading stamps by the undertaker, and she insisted on getting the coupons or she would go elsewhere.

HOME CURES.

Eye Wash.—Add a teaspoonful of powdered boric acid to one cup of boiling water; strain and apply to the eyes night and morning.

To Remove a Ring.—Thread a needle with strong thread; pass carefully under the ring head first, wind the thread tightly around the finger regularly all down to the nail to reduce its size. Then take hold of the short end of the thread and unwind it. The thread pressing against ring gradually will remove it from finger.

Eat plenty of onions, especially in the spring. Take a pint bowl, peel and slice full of onions, put two-thirds cup of sugar over them and cover with a small plate that will press them down. In the morning there will be a thick syrup that is excellent for colds or sore throat. Take a swallow occasionally. Cook onions, thicken with corn meal for poultice, put over lungs for colds; known to prevent pneumonia.

DEATHS AVERAGE ONE A DAY.

Accidents on Transcontinental Construction to be Investigated.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The Dominion Government will investigate the terrible death rate among railway construction workers, on that part of the Grand Trunk Pacific from Kenora out to Thunder Bay. The death rate is nearly one a day, due to dynamite explosions. It is said to be due to the reckless mode of using dynamite. The remedy is said to be a Government certificate for foremen of gangs using explosives, but this the contractors declare to be impossible or impracticable.

ANOTHER EXPLOSION.

Two Italians Killed on G. T. Pacific Near Dryden.

A despatch from Kenora says: Two more victims were added to the frightfully long list of fatalities among the railway construction camps on Thursday morning when an explosion occurred at McDougall's Camp on the Grand Trunk Pacific, near Dryden. Two Italians, whose names are unknown here, were killed, and another terribly mangled. He is in the hospital in a precarious condition.

BOY EATEN BY WOLVES.

Tragedy at Barwick, Near the Canadian Boundary.

A despatch from Fort Francis says: United States settlers living up the Big Fork River opposite the Canadian boundary, who visited Barwick, report that a nine-year-old boy was killed and eaten by timber wolves one day last week. They say the little fellow was attending school, and was for some reason or other kept in after 4 o'clock until nearly dark, when he was permitted to go home, and was devoured along the trail.

SUICIDE AT OTTAWA.

An Italian Out of Work Jumps From Laurier Bridge.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Marino Diogotti, an Italian out of work, jumped from Laurier bridge in an attempt to fall in front of a C. P. R. freight engine on the tracks below. He fell short, was badly injured and succumbed on Thursday afternoon. Despondency is said to have led to the act.

SENT TO INSANE ASYLUM.

Strathroy Man Threatened to Shoot Anyone That Approached Him.

A despatch from Strathroy says: Walter Saxton, a young man about 25 years of age, was arrested by County Constable George C. Wilson on Wednesday night for flourishing firearms and threatening to shoot anyone that came near him. Saxton had been showing signs of insanity, and, while creating a disturbance at his home, was threatened with arrest. Maddened at this, Saxton got hold of a gun, and threatened to shoot anyone who would attempt to arrest him. County Constable Wilson took him unawares and arrested him. He was subsequently sent to the London Asylum. A sad feature of the affair is that Saxton's father has been a patient at the London Asylum for some years.

COMING FROM UNITED STATES.

Immigration to Canada Largely Increased—Fewer from Britain.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The figures of immigration for January and February indicate that immigration to the Canadian west from the United States this year, will be considerably greater than last year. For the two months immigration from the United States shows an increase of 61 per cent., as compared with January and February of last year. Immigration from Great Britain and European ports, on the other hand, shows a decrease of 36 per cent. during the same period.

WHISKEY AND TUBERCULOSIS.

Condition of Indians Along Ontario's Boundary is Lamentable.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Mr. A. S. Beland of Toronto is here after a trip along the C. N. R. in New Ontario. He says the condition of the Indians along the border is lamentable. They are victims of whiskey and tuberculosis.

FADS AND FANCIES.

Everything now-a-days is hemmed. Hair dressing will continue elaborate. The jacket has altogether replaced the bolero.

Fashion insistently demands tan footwear.

Many blouses of the coming spring will show long sleeves.

Bordered gingham offers entrancing suggestions for the summer morning gown.

White linen crash, with a colored stripe border, is one of the practical things among the linens.

Wreaths of frosted foliage and clusters of flowers are among the less expensive of coiffure adornments.

The fashion stripe of the moment is light and dark colors with diagonal stripes at intervals of an inch or more.

The new sailor hat has a broad, flat brim and low crown, and is practically the same thing that was worn five years ago.

The scarabæus, ancient Egypt's royal insect, now finds favor for hatpins, rings, scarf pins, and even for bracelets.

The latest of many shades of blue is known as "Poon," and is a cousin once removed from the still popular Copenhagen.

White cotton voile, trimmed lavishly with valenciennes and cluny or Irish crochet laces, is being used again for lingerie waists.

Many toques for spring wear are composed entirely of foliage, among which are placed either rosebuds, bachelors' buttons or poppies.

Serge and homespun cloth, once tabooed for visiting and smart afternoon wear, now are perfectly correct if only the make and whole appearance of the gown are sufficiently smart.

MILLINERY NOVELTIES.

Big black hats promise to be extremely popular.

Gold and silver gauze ribbons can be worn on lace garden hats.

Chrysanthemums, tulips, and dahlias will be popular in hat trimming.

All the new approved French models of hats are worn quite straight on the head.

Porcelain blue is a popular spring shade for hats, stockings, millinery, and even for gloves.

CAN GROW BEST TOBACCO

Canadian Cigars Shown to Agricultural Committee

A despatch from Ottawa says: "Canada can produce a cigar equal to the best," was the opinion expressed by Mr. F. X. Charlan, Dominion tobacco expert, in giving evidence on Wednesday before the Committee on Agriculture regarding the tobacco-growing possibilities of the country. Some of the varieties of tobacco at present grown in Canada were, he admitted, very inferior, but others had proved highly successful both in Quebec and Ontario. Out of 10,000,000 pounds of tobacco grown in Canada, probably 1,000,000 pounds were of an inferior quality. Quebec and Ontario grew tobacco in about equal proportions and about three-quarters of the total quantity grown was manufactured. He was in favor of legislation which would encourage the farmers to grow tobacco. What was particularly needed was proper packing houses and the establishment of these would lead to good results. Mr. Charlan produced samples of Canadian tobacco for cigar binding which, he declared, was equal to anything grown in Wisconsin.

Mr. Duncan Ross, M. P., submitted samples of Canadian cigars which he said were equal in quality to Havanas.

Mr. Wigle, a large tobacco grower at Kingsville, also gave evidence. Essex and Kent, he said, were well suited for tobacco growing purposes and with some encouragement from the Government, especially in the direction of packing houses, his district could grow twenty-five to thirty million pounds.

Statesmanlike Proposition.

There remains over from the odd numbered sections set apart for railway lands about 30,000,000 acres, which are available for immediate settlement.

Mr. Sifton expressed the opinion that 27,000,000 acres of these lands be thrown open for immediate settlement by homesteaders, and that the balance 3,000,000 acres, be reserved for a later day, when they would be worth $10 to $12 an acre, forming a fund of $30,000,000, which would be sufficient to build the Hudson Bay Railway. This sum would build the railway 500 miles, the wharfs, elevators and everything connected with them, besides lighting and buoying Hudson Bay, surveying the channel, and kindred expenses, and the whole enterprise would not cost the people of Canada a cent.

An additional advantage, would be that incident to the building of the Hudson Bay Railway 100,000,000 acres of land, north of the surveyed land in Alberta and Saskatchewan would become eligible for settlement, and available for such purpose, because it would be brought into communication with the rest of the world, and acquire a value without expense to the people of the country.

All Red Route.

Mr. Sifton said that the All-Red route had its origin in the following resolution passed at the last colonial conference in London.

Resolution.

"That in the opinion of this conference the interests of the Empire demand that, insofar as practicable, the different portions should be connected by the best possible means of mail communication, travel and transportation, and that to this end it is advisable that Great Britain should be connected with Canada, and, through Canada, with Australia, and New Zealand by the best service available within reasonable cost.

"That, for the purpose of carrying the above project into effect such financial support as may be necessary should be contributed by Britain, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand in equitable proportions."

All parties to the conference agreed to the resolution, which embodies the unanimous expression of opinion of Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand. Mr. Sifton said that after discussing the project with prominent gentlemen in England unofficially, he was confident that when Canada, Australia and New Zealand approached Great Britain with a definite proposition they would meet with serious sympathetic consideration.

What Would be Accomplished.

The All-Red route means a service across the Atlantic equal to any in existence and an average speed of 24 knots—the fastest possible service across Canada. Thence from Vancouver to the antipodes by vessels of 9,000 tons with an average speed of 18 knots across the Pacific.

The proposed service would take mail from London to Canada in less than five days, from London to Vancouver in nine days, and from London to New Zealand in 25 days. New Zealand would gain by this project 13 days in her mail service.

Table of Distance.

The following table of distances in his connection is interesting:
Liverpool to Halifax, 2,485 knots.
Liverpool to Quebec, south of Cape Raer, 2,801 knots.
Liverpool to New York, by the shortest actual route 3,026 knots.
Liverpool to Quebec, via Belle Isle, 2,633 knots.

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are affected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Cupid Turns The Tables.

By MARTHA COBB SANFORD.

Copyrighted, 1903, by E. C. Parcells.

It began on the Greenwich local. The man sitting beside Henrietta on the cross seat was reading a typewritten manuscript.

"Either an author or an editor," mused Henrietta and soon allowed her curiosity to get the better of her to the extent of looking over her neighbor's shoulder and reading the story with him.

It proved to be a love story, and as it progressed Henrietta stole a surreptitious glance at the man every now and then. But his expression gave no clew to the impression the story might be making.

Once, as he turned a page, he looked up suddenly and became aware that Henrietta was following the story.

She blushed and started to apologize, but he put her at her ease in quite an unexpected manner.

"I'm glad you've been reading the story," he said, with a friendly smile. "A woman wrote it, and I hope you'll give me your opinion when we've finished it."

So they read on together.

POLITICAL NEWS!

Mr. Sifton, rarely addresses the House, but when he does so, his speeches are appropriate to the occasion and bear the imprint of careful study, and are prepared with a regard to accuracy, and necessary detail which are characteristic of his utterances.

His speech of Friday last on the budget debate was no exception to the rule.—In a few clear cut sentences he disposed of the Foster fallacies with respect to the importance of comparative figures as to what was the relative rate of taxation between 1878 and 1896. There are matters, said Mr. Sifton, in which the country takes only a languid interest, and he intimated that it would be more to the advantage of the country to debate what is being done to-day, and what is contemplated for the future.

Tariff is Satisfactory.

Alluding to the tariff Mr. Sifton said the Government had adopted a tariff which has now been in force in Canada for a good many years, it was based upon certain principles, inaugurated under the financial administration of the present Minister of Finance. It was based upon the idea of a moderately protective tariff with certain features such as preference and the commercial treaties to give elasticity to our commercial system. This tariff said Mr. Sifton, has been subjected to the criticism of the Opposition, but there has been no definite expression of opinion or any resolution proposed by the Opposition indicating any fault in it, or any suggestion as to another method of raising therevenue.

Speaking of financial necessities of the future Mr. Sifton did not fear that the credit of Canada would suffer from the slight strain likely to be put upon it. He was not in sympathy with the blue ruin ideas of Conservatives, who denounced the fiscal arrangements of the Government and voted for them when put to the test.

Mr. Sifton, who is always far-seeing and progressive in his ideas, advocated the organization of a complete system of trade agencies in other countries to stimulate the commerce of Canada. He thought the trade of Canada could be greatly increased by such means, and he favored the training of young men so that they might qualify to enter the service, and by this means Canada would secure a larger portion of the world's trade.

Liverpool to Halifax, 4,489 knots.
Liverpool to Quebec, south of Cape Race, 2,801 knots.

Liverpool to New York, by the shortest actual route 3,026 knots.

Liverpool to Quebec, via Belle Isle, 2,633 knots.

This works out in this way: A 24 knot boat from Liverpool to Halifax, allowing four hours for loss of time, would go in four days, twelve hours. From Liverpool to Quebec, via Belle Isle, allowing six hours for delay would go in four days and twenty hours. From Liverpool to Quebec, via Cape Race, would go in five days and six hours. The Lusitania, when she first broke the record, was five days, eighteen hours and fourteen minutes. She has clipped some off this since.

The time saved by the "All-Red route" over New York route would be via Halifax, one whole day and six hours; via Cape Race, twelve hours; via Belle Isle, twenty-two hours.

Vessels Can be Secured.

As to the possibility of securing boats having the power of the "Lusitania," but smaller in size, Mr. Sifton he had a definite offer for the construction of a vessel of 20,000 tons, equipped in every respect as the "Lusitania" and "Mauretania," capable of making 24 knots in ordinary weather, or in point of fact a 25-knot boat.

The Hydrographic Survey fog charts demonstrate that the tabulated result of comparison shows that the average fog on the Canadian route is three and a half per cent, and the average on the New York route is eight per cent. The New York maximum fog on the whole voyage is sixteen per cent, and the Canadian maximum only eleven per cent. The prevailing idea that there is more fog on the Canadian is quite erroneous. As to the danger of the Canadian route statistics show that from 1880 to 1907 only one passenger vessel, properly so-called had been lost owing to the dangers of the route. Therefore it is quite obvious that the dangers of the Canadian route have been grossly exaggerated.

Proposed Subsidy.

It has been estimated that a 24-knot weekly service between Great Britain and Canada and a fortnightly service between Vancouver and Australia and New Zealand would involve a subsidy of £1,000,000 per annum. It has been suggested that the proportions of the subsidies to be paid by the interested countries would be:

$100 Reward, $100.

Australia, £75,000.

New Zealand, £100,000.

Canada, £325,000.

Great Britain, £500,000.

Thus, the three colonies interested would contribute one-half between them and Great Britain the other half.

The Time Has Come.

Mr. Sifton concluded by expressing the opinion that Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand had arrived at that stage of their commercial development when they were entitled to have the best service modern skill and science could supply. At the present moment, with regard to the great commercial business done between Great Britain and the Antipodes, Canada is on a side street instead of a thoroughfare. Great social, political and commercial advantages would accrue to Canada by being on the main avenue of traffic. The advantages to be gained by diverting the tourist traffic which now goes to the Antipodes via the Mediterranean is incalculable. The knowledge thus gained of Canada and her resources would far outweigh any immediate pecuniary advantages which would accrue should large numbers of monied men from Europe travel across this continent.

Public Accounts Committee.

The Conservative press continues the attack on the methods of examining public accounts, but places before the people a dishonest statement of the facts. The truth of it is that certain accounts which appear in the Auditor-General's report are referred to the committee for investigation. The committee has neither the right nor the power to investigate matters other than those referred to it. In the course of investigating the Opposition members constantly endeavour to bring before the committee matters entirely outside the reference and when the chairman and some members of the committee object upon the ground that the questions refer to matters outside the accounts submitted to the committee, they are met by the cry of obstruction.

Cannot Go Beyond Powers.

With respect to all matters within the scope of the committee's powers, every member of the committee has an equal right, and he can exercise it in his discretion, and being within his rights, there is no power to thwart him in this regard and he may examine and investigate to his heart's content. This is the function of the committee, and any member confining himself to the scope of the committee's powers is performing a public service and utilizing the committee in a proper manner. When, however, attempts are made, and they are constantly made, to probe into affairs that have not been referred to the committee, then such member is asking the committee to go beyond its powers.

unexpeted manner.

"I'm glad you've been reading the story," he said, with a friendly smile. "A woman wrote it, and I hope you'll give me your opinion when we've finished it."

So they read on together.

When they had reached the end they sat for a moment silent, each evidently absorbed in thought.

"Well," said the man at length, "that is perhaps what would happen in real life, but the ending isn't satisfactory from my viewpoint."

"And what is your viewpoint?" ventured Henrietta, her interest in the situation overpowering momentarily her natural shyness. "Are you judging it as just a plain man or as an editor?"

Her query seemed both to please and amuse him, and Henrietta was surprised to find herself answering his smile quite as if they were old acquaintances.

"I am judging it," he said, "as an editor who tries to imagine himself just a plain man. But what do you think about it?"

"I'm afraid I agree with the author," answered Henrietta, somewhat timidly, "but really my opinion doesn't count in the least, because—"

"On the other hand," interrupted the man, "it counts supremely. It is the opinions of just such casual readers as yourself that I have to study and learn to understand almost intuitively, as it were."

"But to get back to the point in question. You mean that 'love at first sight' isn't worth writing about—that the type of woman who would consent to marry a man on short acquaintance isn't the stuff that heroines are made of?"

"Not exactly that perhaps. But any one could make the story end happily—have them marry, I mean. That would have been the ordinary way. It must have taken some courage to end it the other way, and it seems to me the story's stronger for it."

"But you see," persisted the editor, "everything in the story goes to show that this man and woman, though they met just once casually, as you and I are meeting, were most remarkably en rapport. Why, then, does the author never have them meet again after making her reader feel that they ought, by all that is happy and harmonious, to belong to each other?"

Henrietta smiled at the man's earnestness.

"Well," she began defensively, "perhaps the author was trying to show that, although a man and a woman may meet by accident, like that, and even feel and admit each to himself or herself that they really do belong to each other, yet neither one quite dares—Oh, I'm afraid I don't just know how to express it," she broke off, blushing consciously at having spoken so freely to an utter stranger.

"Thank you," said the man, and his manner was both sympathetic and thoughtful. "I begin to understand. But I'm still unconvinced as to its being the popular or natural viewpoint. If I could talk to the author herself, I feel quite sure that I could."

"Goodness!" said Henrietta, starting suddenly. "This is my station. Good night."

The more Henrietta let her thoughts dwell upon this unusual little discussion the more she found herself yielding to the editor's point of view. There was no real reason, after all, why the man and woman in the story shouldn't have married and continued to "live happily ever after."

Still that would be a most commonplace ending, after all, and she accused herself of being influenced, as was the editor, not by the artistic but by the commercial value of the story.

So she tried to think of new arguments to defend the author's denouement. The heroine, she imagined, was

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's label—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding very much the same type of girl as herself and, like herself, therefore preferred to keep those few moments of chance acquaintanceship an idealized memory upon which she could look back forever and a day with joyful satisfaction.

An ordinary person might yield to the temptation of following up the lead, but the heroine of that story was not ordinary. Upon that the author and Henrietta agreed perfectly.

She herself, for instance, in her own comparatively insignificant experience would probably never meet the editor again, and what would it matter? She had the memory of their pleasant interchange of thought, and he of course would never think of her again. But here the defense weakened and hid her blushing face in her hands.

A few days later when Henrietta received a very courteous note from the editor of the New Fiction Magazine asking her to call at his office for the purpose of talking over her story she smiled archly, dressed herself most becomingly and made her way promptly, but more or less tremulously, to his august sanctum. It was a novel situation.

What if he had reversed his original opinion too? Would she or wouldn't she be pleased?

The editor's surprise proved intensely amusing to Henrietta at least.

"You—the author herself?" was all he was able to gasp. Then he broke out into a hearty laugh, in which Henrietta joined merrily.

"You still hold to your first opinion, I suppose?" Henrietta asked tentatively.

"More firmly than ever," was the editor's emphatic reply.

"Then the story is rejected?" queried Henrietta wistfully.

"Not if I can convince the author into my way of thinking," he answered brightly. "I have great confidence in my own powers of persuasion."

Henrietta looked skeptical. Since he chose to be so confident, she would never let him know that she was half persuaded already. She would defend her original ending of the story, just to keep him guessing.

And the arguments upon arguments that followed! Was ever the fate of a story held so long in the balance? And all the time that Henrietta was defending the story as it stood, in her own heart she was recasting it as the man willed and wanted.

A suspicion of the true state of affairs gradually convinced the editor that his best play was to confess himself vanquished.

"OIL OF GLADNESS."

SHOOTING WITH MORTARS.

Hitting the Target Is Simply a Matter of Mathematics.

How do we hit with the mortars? An observer near the shore who sees the target communicates the horizontal and vertical angle at which to lay the mortar and the instant of time at which to fire, and the gun does the rest. If you were standing at the center of a large clock dial laid flat on the ground and wanted to hit with a baseball a man walking around on the outside, you would notice how long it took the man to get from I to II and again from II to III. Then you would decide whether if the ball were thrown over a point halfway between III and V just as he arrived opposite III the man and the ball would reach the same spot at the same time, it being understood, of course, that he maintained uniform speed and direction and that the ball was thrown with proper force. Instruments give us the range and observations, and mechanical devices give us the range differences, increasing or decreasing by certain short intervals of time, too short for a ship of any size to escape by attempting to change direction or speed. Our observer's circle has 36,000 divisions.—Captain Howell in Scientific American.

Carelessness of the Hens.

The Eridies, had been in their new country house for scarcely a week before the girl who went out to hunt for strictly fresh eggs came back empty handed.

"Where are the eggs, Ellen?" asked Mrs. Bridie.

"Sure, mum, Oi couldn't foind a wan."

"Did you look in the henhouse?"

"Yis, mum."

"And in the haymow?"

"Oi wint all over the place."

"And the manger?"

"They warn't there, mum."

"Well, sometimes Henry collects the eggs in a basket and hangs it under the cow shed."

"Oi found the basket, but it wuz impty. Oi hunted all over the place and, high nor low, sorra a sign of thim eggs could Oi foind anywhere."

"Dear me," said Mrs. Bridie absently, "I hope they haven't been mislaid!"

TOMB OF THE MINGS.

It Is a Risky Place For a Traveler to Visit Alone.

Every traveler in China goes to the tomb of the Mings if he stays more than a few days in Shanghai. The Chinese consider the Mings the greatest rulers of the ancient kingdom, and they rank second only to Confucius. The tomb is composed of two colossal figures facing each other and elaborately carved in the style affected by Chinese artists centuries ago. Seen in Central park or Versailles they would look grotesque enough, but standing as they do among bleak and lonely hills, outlined against the clear blue oriental sky, they have a rude grandeur and imposing simplicity which make them seem fit guardians of imperial dust.

It is not an easy journey the tourist must take if he wishes to pay his respects to the stone giants, nor is it a trip advisable for a woman to undertake, as it lies through a region where hatred of the "white devils" is considered as much a part of the Chinaman's religion as the worship of his ancestors. A donkey and a guide are necessary, and it is also wise to get a party of sightseers together for the excursion if possible and to go well armed, for once a foolhardy traveler started forth alone from the hotel on the Bub-

"OIL OF GLADNESS."

South American Nervine has proved itself the "oil of gladness" to many a nerve-sick sufferer. It starts to work at the fountain-head of the trouble—the digestion. It tones the stomach, helps to assimilate the food, promotes healthy circulation, stimulates the flow of rich, red blood, accelerates the action of the organs.

South American Nervine cures nervousness, sleeplessness, neuralgia, nervous prostration, nervous choking, nervous twitchings, hot flashes, sick head-ache, dyspepsia, indigestion, and all kindred ailments. It is the very nectar of health. (33)

Henrietta was radiant. "There!" she cried triumphantly. "I've made you take it just as it is. You didn't win me over, after all."

"Didn't I?" was all the editor said, but looked straight into her eyes.

Henrietta lowered hers, but made no reply.

And then the editor did a very cruel thing.

"I suppose you are going to put your theories into practice, then, and never let me see you again? Of course you'd rather keep our acquaintance a memory and not let it be spoiled by any such commonplace thing as love and marriage."

"Please don't," begged Henrietta, struggling to keep back the tears. "I told you the very first time we met that it took courage to end the story that way. It may be that the woman isn't as strong as the author."

The editor smiled very tenderly. "I accept them both," he said lovingly, folding her to him, "just as they are."

But Henrietta would not have it so. "No," she whispered, "I'm going to rewrite the ending. I know now what it ought to be."

Willing to Help.

Young Mr. Sapley was making a protracted call upon the object of his affections, Miss Evans, who was a pianist of considerable ability.

She had just completed twenty-five minutes of Bach in the hope that he would get tired and go home. "Oh, Miss Evans," he exclaimed, "I could just die listening to your playing!"

"Would you like to have me play some more, Mr. Sapley?" asked Miss Evans innocently.

Talking Machines.

"Everything lovely down at the house?"

"Yes. We are leading the quiet life these days."

"How do you work it?"

"Well, you see, we have a phonograph, and it alternates with my wife after supper."

religion as the worship of his ancestors. A donkey and a guide are necessary, and it is also wise to get a party of sightseers together for the excursion if possible and to go well armed, for once a foolhardy traveler started forth alone from the hotel on the Bubbling Well road, Shanghai, to visit the tomb of the Mings, and he was never heard of again. There are many places in the purlieus of Shanghai even where it is imprudent for a white man to venture alone in broad daylight. An extra donkey is also needed to carry provisions as well as the cameras, for most tourists want a picture of the towering images which have so successfully withstood the wear of the centuries.

Odd North German Custom.

In northern Germany a familiar figure of the rural districts is a quaint old gentleman whose hat is very much decorated with flowers and particular ribbons and who carries a staff to the top of which is tied a huge bunch of real or artificial flowers knotted to it by long streamers of similar ribbons. According to the district, his costume also is old fashioned and unusual in other ways. He is the "hochzeitbitter," or person employed among the country folk to go from house to house and invite guests to attend a wedding. He delivers himself of a set speech in an old "Platt Deutsch" rhyme when he arrives at each place, accompanying it with wagging of the head and stamping of the staff, and is generally in rather a jovial condition by the time his day's labors are ended.

Milton's Retort.

John Milton was not a wit, yet he is reported to have made a crushing reply to a question from Charles II.

"Do you not think," said the king, "that your blindness is a judgment on you for having written in justification of my father's murder?"

"Sir," replied the poet, "it is true I have lost my eyesight, but if all the calamitous providences are to be regarded as divine judgments your majesty should remember that your father lost his head."

All That Didn't Sink.

"I suppose you have considerable floating population here?" inquired the visitor.

"Yep," replied the native of the little river town, "specially durin' the rainy season."—Puck.

NOW I AM WELL

THANKS TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Eli, Manitoba.

I wish to state, for the sake of others who may be sufferers like I was, that I suffered from severe indigestion and constipation for years and that there was also womb trouble with unpleasant pains in my back which made me miserable, constantly. I tried physicians and took many remedies but I got no relief. I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives" and I can truly say this was the first medicine that ever did me any good. "Fruit-a-tives" quickly relieved the constipation and indigestion and completely cured me of all symptoms of womb trouble. I cannot express too strongly my great gratitude to this medicine as I am as well now in every way as ever I was, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives". I can strongly recommend "Fruit-a-tives", it is easy to take and the effect is always mild like fruit.

(Sgd) MRS. M. BREILAND.

Many women suffer with what the doctors call "Womb Trouble"—"Diseased Ovaries"—"Female Complaints" etc.—when Constipation is causing all the pain. Cure the liver and make the bowels move regularly with "Fruit-a-tives" and the "Womb Trouble" will be cured at the same time.

"Fruit-a-tives"—or "Fruit Liver Tablets" are sold by dealers at 50c a box—6 for $2.50—or will be sent on receipt of price. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The remark made on a prolix Scotch counsel when some one observed that he was "surely wasting a great deal of time" is among the wittiest of bar anecdotes: "Time! He has long exhausted time and has encroached upon eternity!"

It is seldom, to do the judges justice, that they encourage this failing in counsel. But in Cockburn's memoirs we are told how a dull and commonplace advocate was almost frightened out of his wits by an observation of Lord Meadowbank, who thought his style undignified: "Declaim, sir. Why don't you declaim? Speak to me as if I were a popular assembly."—St. James' Gazette.

MEN OF THE FRONTIER

How They Brought Law and Order to the Unruly West.

THE RULE OF THE REVOLVER.

Life In the Wild Days When Gun Plays Occasioned Little Comment, Yet When There Was Always Safety In "Leaving It to the Crowd."

The bold, reckless life of the frontier of the middle years of the nineteenth century and later has been often recalled by the stories of desperadoes and bad men, but in the birth and growth of the frontier cities is a unique phase of American civic genius which has been little dwelt upon.

Most of the cities of the far west have hovered close about the gatherings of hardy miners as they came or went on a feverish search for gold. In forty-nine 80,000 men from all parts of the world reached the El Dorado of California. Some traveled 2,000 miles overland; others went far around by Panama or Cape Horn. In fifty-nine 100,000 gold seekers stampeded wildly across the sunburnt plains of Colorado. Only 40,000 stayed the year through. Of like kind, although of smaller proportions, were all the pilgrimages that are more or less responsible for the cities of the west, the finding of a streak of magic yellow, its story leaking out and growing, the glimpse of nuggets and specimens and then the grand, senseless rush to the Land of Get-Rich-Quick.

Thousands of daring spirits were drawn by the yellow loadstone, intent on nothing but the accumulation of wealth. Then necessity produced some weird assemblages of tents, shanties and log cabins, many of which grew into cities. Often full grown towns sprang up in a few months. Far from any state or territorial government and composed of a conglomerated herd of excited men, none of whom had time for civic affairs, these embryo cities existed and grew under conditions that were unique and extremely wild.

Our forefathers landed on the eastern coast full of religious zeal and a desire for freedom of thought and life. Their leaders and law came with them. They prayed and lived communistically as long as they could, then increased, expanded and developed into a nation. But the gold discoveries of California, Nevada, Colorado and Montana brought thousands of independent men to the wilderness who were full of the hunger for gold, not homes; who had no leaders, no laws to which they could appeal and nothing to bind them together. Then the leaders came out of the crowd, and the law grew as it was needed. It was only after a time that any of these men came to consider remaining permanently in the country, and it was these venturesome builders who developed the newer part of our nation.

From the nature of things, with so much at stake among such hard living men, there were plenty of fights and disputes. There being no authority to which to appeal, differences were settled between man and man. A six shooter was the greatest help a man could get toward a physical superiority over other men, and so everybody carried a "gun" and knew how to use it. The trigger finger grew nimble with practice, and there developed a condition where frequent killings and shootings occasioned little comment or criticism, where men were almost indifferent to the spilling of blood and looked death square in the face with a nonchalance that is hardly conceivable now. Shooting affrays were the froth of a very strong brew of the border life, and they put a settlement to questions quickly and definitely. If when the smoke cleared away some good man lay biting the dust, his light had gone out according to the code of the time, fierce and barbarous as codes must be when man first struggles with nature.

And yet there was always safety in "leaving it to the crowd." The general sentiment of the community was very partial to fairness and honesty during the early days of most border towns. There were no locks or keys, almost any man's credit was good to any amount, and stores and provisions could lay untouched for months in wholly ungarded places. It was the natural, frank honesty of the virgin west and a veritable paradise for thieves and criminals.

After suffering eight years, this woman was restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Read her letter.

Mrs. A. D. Trudeau, Arnprior, Ontario, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I suffered terribly from ulceration of the feminine organs for eight years. I tried four doctors but got no relief, and thought I would have to die. One day I saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper. I sent for some, and before I had used five bottles I was entirely cured. I hope every suffering woman will take my advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. REMARKABLE INVENTION

FOR THE

CULTURE OF HAIR

CULTURE OF HAIR

THE EVANS VACUUM CAP is a practical invention constructed on scientific and hygienic principles by the simple means of which a free and normal circulation is restored throughout the scalp. The minute blood vessels are gently stimulated to activity, thus allowing the food supply which can only be derived from the blood, to be carried to the hair roots, the effects of which are quickly seen in a healthy vigorous growth of hair. There is no rubbing, and as no drugs or chemicals of whatsoever kind are employed there is nothing to cause irritation. It is only necessary to wear the Cap three or four minutes daily.

60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL!

The 'Company's Guarantee.

An EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent you for sixty days' free trial. I do not see a gradual development of a new growth of hair, and are not convinced that the Cap will completely restore your hair, you are at liberty to return the Cap with no expense whatever to yourself. It is requested, as an evidence of good faith, that the price of the Cap be deposited with the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company of London, the largest financial and business institution of the kind in the world, who will issue a receipt guaranteeing that the money will be returned in full, on demand without questions or comment, at any time during the trial period.

The eminent Dr. I. N. LOVE, in his address to the Medical Board on the subject of Alopecia (loss of hair) stated that if a means could be devised to bring nutrition to the hair follicles their roots, without restoring to any irritant process, the problem of hair growth would be solved. Later on, when the EVANS VACUUM CAP was submitted to him for inspection, he remarked that the Cap would fulfil and confirm in practice the observations he had previously made before the Medical Board.

Dr. W. MOORE, referring to the invention, says that the principle upon which the Evans Vacuum Cap is founded is absolutely correct and indisputable.

An illustrated and descriptive book of the Evans Vacuum Cap will be sent, post free, on application.

towns. There were no locks or keys, almost any man's credit was good to any amount, and stores and provisions could lay untouched for months in wholly unguarded places. It was the natural, frank honesty of the virgin west and a veritable paradise for thieves and criminals.

And they came, hordes of murdering, plundering adventurers who knew no code of morals or chivalry, and resorted to anything to accomplish their ends. They found plunder rich, crime easy and escape still easier and, drifting all over the country, levied tribute from each new camp as it sprang into being. Often these men were in such a majority that a man who believed in honesty and justice was a man indeed if he had the courage to back his ideals. But there were such men, men as God meant men to be, full of the sense of right and the fitness of things and unafraid. They stepped right into the opening and tackled some of the cussedest crowds in Christendom, teaching a wholesome respect for "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" to bunches of drinking, blasphemous and unharnessed tempers. The gun fightings, lynchings and wanton spillings of blood that specked the histories of the time may have been very close to savagery, but they serve now to deepen the respect we must have for men who harnessed law and order on such conditions.

A ROTHSCHILD STORY.

The Reward That Came to a Student With a Heart.

Old Rothschild stories are popular now in Europe. "Some are true," says an English writer, "some are only clever, and many are simply inventions. But all are read with interest." Here is one from the Bystander, London:

"At a luncheon given by Empress Eugenie at the Tuileries the head of the Paris house of Rothschild was seated opposite a great painter. Rothschild was not blessed with good looks and had, moreover, an expression of distress and resignation combined. The painter could not take his eyes off him, and this worried Rothschild not a little. After the meal he asked the painter why he had taken so great an interest in him, and to his great amazement the painter informed him that he had studied him as a model for a beggar in a picture he was then evolving. Rothschild's face brightened, and he said, 'I will sit for you.' And he did. One day when he was posing a pupil of the painter's was so touched by the expression of woe on the face of the model that he slipped a five franc piece into the 'poor man's' hand and vanished before an explanation was possible. The next day the young man received £400 as interest on his well invested 5 francs."

"BED-RIDDEN FOR YEARS."

Such cases are not hopeless when the right treatment is resorted to. South American Rheumatic Cure has cured hundreds of so-called "incurables." Relieves in six hours.

The marvellous curative power and effectiveness of South American Rheumatic Cure is in the quickness with which it acts and the almost "lightning change" for the better in the Rheumatic Victim after taking a few doses. It seems next to incredible—but there is no deception—it's work is apparent, and every step taken toward recovery is a permanent one. History repeats itself daily in this wonderful treatment—it never fails. (34)

Just Breaking In.

Up to the age of sixteen Dick had retained the proper scorn for things feminine; then he went to dancing school and fell smitten by the charms of several youthful Eves. Accordingly Dick approached his father and requested theater tickets for two.

Father complied and merely asked as he turned over the seats, "Which girl is it?"

"I'm going to take Mabel," responded Dick.

"Then she's the one you like best?" father continued.

Dick turned a superior and pitying eye upon his parent. "Oh, no; I don't like her best! You don't understand the situation, father. It isn't the girl I care about. It's the experience I want."

Poor William!

"William, my son," said an economical mother to her boy, "for mercy's sake, don't keep on tramping up and down the floor in that manner. You'll wear out your new boots." (He sits down.) "There you go sitting down! Now you'll wear out your new trousers. I declare, I never saw such a boy!"—London Tit-Bits.

A Sharp Thrust.

"You're trying very hard to be a man, it seems," said the disgusted husband the other day to his wife. "Well," she replied coldly, "don't you think we need one in the family?"

Liberals Oppose Irregularities.

This course of proceeding has been opposed by Messrs MacDonald, Pardee, McLean and others upon the ground that the committee has many accounts to investigate, and no right nor power to travel beyond the matters referred to it. This the Opposition are pleased to describe as obstruction and a desire to conceal something. There is no suggestion that there is anything wrong about the affairs the Opposition wish to discuss, but there is very decided and proper objection to wasting the time of the committee upon matters which it has nothing to do with.

Much Latitude Permitted.

The greatest latitude is allowed to members of the committee, and on many occasions the chairman of the committee permits examination to go beyond the immediate affair under examination to show the entire transaction from its inception. This practice has been greatly abused of late, and when the gentlemen referred to have registered their objection they are not credited with a desire to proceed with the examination of the public accounts in a proper and legitimate manner, but on the contrary, are held up to public derision as men who attempt to block investigation and conceal the truth. This is a shameful and unjust method of discrediting political opponents, and it only remains for the facts to be known for the people to place the blame where it properly belongs, and that is on the shoulders of those men who, in their intense desire to secure power, do not hesitate to prostitute the functions of a select committee of the House to the base and unworthy purposes of a political capital machine in their own interests, and by doing this they lose sight entirely of the interests of the public, which this committee is supposed to guard.

Mr. Turriff Testifies.

To the embarrassment of the Conservatives, on Wednesday last Mr. Turriff insisted on being called to testify on the subject of the methods adopted when receiving and opening timber tenders at the time he was Commissioner of Dominion Lands.

Members of the Opposition had not hesitated to insinuate that Mr. Turriff had acted improperly as a public official in this regard, but although often invited to do so, they would not charge anything definite. Mr. Turriff appeared in the committee day after day and offered to testify, but the Conservatives did not dare call him. They knew quite well that their whole case would vanish into thin air after Mr. Turriff had given his evidence. It therefore remained for Mr. McLean to call Mr. Turriff to the stand.

Tories Asinine Exhibition.

A tamer Exhibition on the part of the Opposition it would be impossible to imagine. Here was the one man in the country who knew all about it. The one man against whom Mr. Foster had hurled his maledictions. The man who now occupies a seat on the Liberal side of the House, and to prove him unworthy and discredit him would necessarily reflect upon the Liberal party, but the Conservatives were afraid to call him. They dared not put him on the stand. They feared to trust their accusations in the presence of the truth, and so far as the Conservatives are concerned the public would never have received the benefit of Mr. Turriff's evidence. In short it was this:

What Turriff Proved

To All the Women Who Suffer Per-u-na Is Earnestly Commended

Mrs. Geo. C. Worstell, 11 River Road, Clarksburg, W. Va., writes:

"I trust that no one will think from this that I want my name in public for any cause only to let sufferers know where they may find relief from many ailments."

"I can truly say I have been much benefited by the use of Peruna. I feel better than I have for two years. It is the best medicine that I know for pelvic troubles."

"I have taken medicine from the doctors and found no relief; but when I began taking Peruna I could see that before I had finished taking the first bottle it was doing me good."

Cold Developed Into Catarrh.

Mrs. N. P. Lawler, 423½ N. Broadway, Pittsburg, Kas., writes:

"Peruna is a sovereign remedy for catarrh. Last spring I caught a severe cold which developed into a serious case of catarrh. I felt weak and sick and could neither eat nor sleep well."

"A friend who had been cured of catarrh through the use of Peruna advised me to try it and I did so at once. I expected help, but nothing like the wonderful change for the better I observed almost as soon as I started taking it."

"In three days I felt much better and within a week I was well. I continued taking the entire bottle and within two weeks I was in fine health. Peruna is a wonderful medicine."

Catarrh of the Bowels.

Mrs. Maggie Durbin, 1332 North St., Little Rock, Ark., writes:

"I was troubled for five years with a chronic disease. I tried everything I heard of, but nothing did me any good. Some doctors said my trouble was catarrh of the bowels, and some said consumption of the bowels. One doctor said he could cure me; I took his medicine two months, but it did me no good."

"A friend of mine advised me to try Peruna and I did so. After I had taken two bottles I found it was helping me, so I continued its use, and it has cured me sound and well."

"If anyone wants to know what Peruna did for me if they will write to me I will answer promptly."

Pains in the Side.

Mrs. Julia Braxton, Apollo, Pa., writes:

"Peruna has cured me of heart trouble and pains in the side."

"A year ago I was expected to die at any time, and the doctor was sometimes called at two o'clock in the morning. But I am thankful to say that I do not now have to send for a doctor now."

"Since I have used your Peruna as you advised me, I am well and able to do all my housework."

"I have all the faith in the world in Peruna as it cured me and I know that it will cure others."

"I cannot praise Peruna enough for what it has done for me."

Stomach Trouble.

Miss Anna Carsten, Clayton, Ill., writes:

"Your Peruna did me so much good. I am feeling so well now and have no trouble with my stomach."

NOT IN A HURRY.

A Royal Funeral and an Embarrassed Blundering Official.

The Comtesse de Boigne's memoirs contain an interesting account of the departure from life of Louis XVIII., an event which the king himself had long been anticipating:

MISS NETTIE E. BOGARDUS

Miss Nettie E. Bogardus, R. F. D. 21, Westfield, N. Y., writes:

"I have been a great sufferer from sick headaches, but am now entirely free from that trouble. I have not felt so well in ten years as I do now. I would recommend Peruna and Manalin to all sufferers. I will say, God bless Dr. Hartman and his wonderful remedies."

Stomach Catarrh.

Miss Julia Butler, R. R. 4, Appleton, Wis., writes:

"For the past six years I suffered with catarrh of the stomach, causing loss of sleep and appetite, with frequent severe pains after eating."

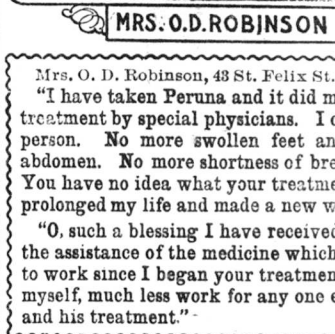

"My sister advised me to try Peruna. I took your treatment and my appetite returned speedily."

"I gained strength and flesh and am in perfect health."

"I am so thankful your medicine has done me so much good."

MRS. GEO. C. WORSTELL

MRS. O. D. ROBINSON

Mrs. O. D. Robinson, 48 St. Felix St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I have taken Peruna and it did me more good than all my two years' treatment by special physicians. I can really say that I feel like another person. No more swollen feet and limbs. No more bloating of the abdomen. No more shortness of breath. No more stiff and sore joints. You have no idea what your treatment has done for me. It certainly has prolonged my life and made a new woman of me."

"O, such a blessing I have received through your kindness, doctor, and the assistance of the medicine which you so kindly prescribed. I am able to work since I began your treatment, but before I was not able to help myself, much less work for any one else. All praise is due to Dr. Hartman and his treatment."

CURES FOR LOVE.

Sages and Writers With Widely Differing Prescriptions.

Absence is one of the means of curing love. Two thousand years ago Ovid advised his readers who wished to cure themselves of an unlucky attachment to flee the capital, to travel, hunt or till the soil.

"Love," said Coleridge, "is a local anguish. I am fifty miles away and not half so miserable."

But other men have found that absence increases love. La Rochefoucauld probably hit upon the truth when he

His Bright Idea.

Not many years ago a well known dealer was visited by a would be seller who had in his hand an envelope containing seventeen signatures of Samuel Pepys, which, he said, he had just cut off the original letters to save trouble! By so doing he had diminished the value of his property by nearly £200.—London Opinion.

trust their accusations in the presence of the truth, and so far as the Conservatives are concerned the public would never have received the benefit of Mr. Turriff's evidence. In short it was this:

What Turriff Proved.

He never opened any tender until the time had expired for receiving them.

He did not retire to a dark room to open them, as charged.

He always opened them in the presence of another official, never alone, as charged.

The limits were always awarded to the highest tenderer.

The tenders as received were placed in a safe, and no one had access to them, and they were never opened until the proper time, and only then as described above.

He is not interested directly or indirectly in the Imperial Pulp Company, The Big River Lumber Company, or any tender put in by A. W. Fraser. Neither does any person hold any interest for him, neither was he ever promised any interest by any person directly or indirectly.

He never had any suggestion made to him by any person while he was in office to do an improper act.

He never favored any man, but treated all alike in accordance with existing regulations.

Mr. Turriff described as a "deliberate lie" the statements with regard to himself made by Mr. Foster, who, by the way, thought it well to absent himself from the committee when Mr. Turriff was on the stand.

After the examination had concluded Mr. Turriff might very appropriately have followed the example of the immortal Sam Weller and said:

"Would any other gentleman like to ask me anything?"

And he would have met with a similar response. Thus passeth away what is known as the timber limit scandal.

"He was a great stickler for etiquette and gave the most minute instructions about his obsequies. All the ceremonials observed at the departure of the kings of France were to be respected, and as he had an extraordinary memory he settled the procedure down to the smallest details. At the last the royal almoner made a mistake in reading the prayers for those in extremis. Louis XVIII. interrupted him and corrected the mistake with a presence of mind and calmness which never left him for a moment. The family was assembled at the end of the room and was deeply affected. The doctors, the attendants on duty and the clergy were around the bed. The first gentleman of the chamber held the curtain. When the chief physician gave the sign that all was over, he let it fall and, turning around, bowed to the princes. Monsieur left the room sobbing, and madame prepared to follow him. Hitherto she had always taken precedence of her husband as the king's daughter. When she reached the door, she suddenly stopped, and through the heartfelt tears with which her face was streaming she said with difficulty, 'Take precedence, Dauphin!' He immediately obeyed without any hesitation or remark. The first gentleman announced 'the king.' The courtiers repeated 'the king,' and Charles X. reached his rooms.

"The master of ceremonies made some slight blunders over the royal funeral. Charles X. overlooked them and spoke kindly to the embarrassed official. 'Oh, sire, your majesty is very kind, but there were many defects. Next time we will do better.' 'Thank you, Breze,' replied the king, with a smile, 'but I am not in a hurry.' Thereupon M. de Breze collapsed."

or till the soil.

"Love," said Coleridge, "is a local anguish. I am fifty miles away and not half so miserable."

But other men have said that absence increases love. La Rochefoucauld probably hit upon the truth when he said that "absence destroys weak passions, but increases strong ones, as the wind extinguishes a candle, but blows up a fire." If the love is all fancy and has little strength it may be cured by personal contact with the object. But the safer plan perhaps is to keep out of the way; hence travel is a good expedient. Business perhaps is a better one. Ovid said, "If you desire to end your love employ yourself and you will conquer, for love flees business."

Still another expedient is reflection upon the unhappiness of married life. A man in search of this view can find it everywhere. Addison said that "beauty soon grows familiar to the lover, fades in his eye and falls upon the sense," and Hazlitt that, "though familiarity may not breed contempt, it takes the edge off admiration."

Goethe said, "With most marriage it does not take long for things to assume a very piteous look." But none of these men married happily. Goldsmith said, "Many of the English marry in order to have one happy month in their lives," and Colley Cibber, "Oh, how many torments lie in the small circle of a wedding ring!"

But undoubtedly the best way to get rid of one love is to have another. "All love may be expelled by love as poisons are by other poisons," says Dryden. Heine says: "The most effective antidote to woman is woman. In such a case the medicine is often more noxious than the malady, but it is at any rate a change, and in a disconcerting way affair a change in the humors is unquestionably the best policy."

CAPPING THE WIGS.

Official Visit of London's Lord Mayor to the Law Courts.

A curious survival of mediæval custom is witnessed in London on every lord mayor's day. This is an official visit of the lord mayor to the law courts. In old times the sovereign himself awaited at Westminster the coming of the lord mayor in a chariot of state with sword bearer, mace holder, chaplain and gorgeously liveried coachmen and footmen. The forms have been changed, and the visit is now paid to the high court, but the spirit of the act remains, for the lord mayor opens his term in the Mansion House with a ceremonial involving recognition of the supreme authority of the crown.

The instrument used for expressing this traditional idea is an old fashioned cocked hat. When the lord mayor or in his splendid robes of office enters the high court with his retinue in costume he solemnly lifts his cocked hat three times from his head and salutes the lord chief justice and the justices.

The judges always wear robes and wigs when in court. For lord mayor's day they have also a flat black cap, which can be slipped over the top of the wig. The lord chief justice and his associates return the lord mayor's salute gravely, but do not take off their black caps. If they were to do this, they would place the crown on a level of equality with the municipality.

The lord mayor, with his retinue, then visits the judges in other courts to invite them to the Guildhall banquet. When the rustling noise of the procession is heard each judge fumbles in a drawer, pulls out a little square of black cloth and crowns his wig with it. The lord mayor takes off his three cornered hat three times, and the justice on the bench bows, but remains covered.

DO YOUR CHILDREN ASK QUESTIONS

Of course they do. It is their way of learning and it is your duty to answer. You may need a dictionary to aid you. It won't answer every question, but there are thousands to which it will give you true, clear and definite answers, not about words only, but about things, the sun, men, machinery, places, stories and the like. Then, too, the children can find their own answers. Some of our greatest men have ascribed their power to study of the dictionary.

What May be Done With Cold Vegetables

A Lively young housekeeper writes:

"Everybody — Marion Harland included—is preaching small economies just now. I am perpetually admonished to gather up the fragments and to let nothing be wasted. I am warned that the garbage pail is a delusion and a snare. According to my mentors, everything may be utilized for the family table.

"I am writing this in the kitchen. The morning work is done up. I am on the hunt for something that may do for luncheon and save me the trouble of going to market. My John comes home to luncheon. Usually I am glad that he does. Sometimes—not often—his coming perplexes me. He is not 'laid off' as yet. I hope and pray that "Take pity upon me (and if others would be as frank you would have the same story from them) and tell us how to dispose of the dabs.

"In reading over my list it occurs to me that you may wonder how I happen to have so much on hand. I can hear you suspect that we must be lavish livers to have so many vegetables at a meal.

"Dear lady! the list has been growing for a week! I keep every one of the dabs on ice, or in a covered box on the outer window-sill.

"All are fresh. If they were spoiled, there would be no sin in dumping them into the sinful garbage pail."

JULIA K. M. (Camden, N. J.).

I ought, perhaps, to blue-pencil that letter, for it is far beyond our regulation length. It is so jolly that I can he won't be. But lots of as good men as he have lost their jobs. It behooves us not to waste a crumb and not to spend a penny that can be saved against a rainy day. I used to be a teacher in the public schools, but when I was married, three years ago, I knew rather more about cooking than your poor 'distracted' Martha did. I like house-keeping. I am fond of cooking. John says I am a first-class cook. I am painfully conscious that I have lots to learn. One thing is—and that is what I began to write about—what upon the earth is a woman to do with little dabs of cold vegetables? I mean the left-overs of several days. Once, I should have shied them into the garbage pail without a misgiving. Now, thanks to the aforementioned admonitions, I put them away in the refrigerator, and take them out next day and the next, and wonder what I can make of a tablespoonful of cabbage, and two spoonfuls of baked beans, and the same quantity of stewed tomatoes, and two baked potatoes, and a spoonful and a half of mashed potatoes, and a dab of rice.

"As you may guess, that is an inven-not leave out a line. Furthermore, by one of the coincidences that fall too often into our lives to be called remarkable, it comes to my hand just as I am on the point of attacking the subject next in order on the schedule for the Housemothers' Exchange, "What to do with cold vegetables."

Of course, what I have to say is too late to help Julia in the present strait. It may be of use to her next week, and, as she says, it may not be thrown away upon other "Marthas" when confronted by an array of "dabs." The word is inelegant, but too expressive to be dispensed with at this time.

lent germs. It is possible that the censor may have confused the ideas of the stock pot and the garbage pail. In my kitchen the stock pot goes upon the range daily. Fresh stock is made twice a week in summer, once a week in winter, of fresh bones, well cracked, and lean meat chopped. Fresh vegetables are added, and the soup kettle is thoroughly cleansed. A certain quantity of the new stock is strained and set aside for clear soups. The rest is the foundation of savory broths, etc. Left-overs of such vegetables as turnips, onions and cabbage, of which but a "dab" remains, go into the stock pot. mentioned admonitions, I put them away in the refrigerator, and take them out next day and the next, and wonder what I can make of a tablespoonful of cabbage, and two spoonfuls of baked beans, and the same quantity of stewed tomatoes, and two baked potatoes, and a spoonful and a half of mashed potatoes, and a dab of rice.

"As you may guess, that is an inventory of what is staring me out of countenance and driving me to say 'words' at this blessed minute.

"They are not dignified enough to be called 'left-overs.' They are nothing but dabs! You can't make them into souffles or warmed-uppers of any kind that I know of. I didn't count in a solitary stalk of celery that I overlooked yesterday when I was preparing celery for dinner. Nor did I mention the forlornest dab of all—a couple of spoonfuls of creamed carrots. John likes them. I don't. So we have them once a week and there are always some left.

It may be of use to her next week, and, as she says, it may not be thrown away upon other "Marthas" when confronted by an array of "dabs." The word is inelegant, but too expressive to be dispensed with at this time.

Begin we with the tomatoes and rice. Mixed together, seasoned, not forgetting a touch of onion juice, and turned into a tiny bakedish, or into two "nappies," they should be bestrewn with cheese and set in the oven until lightly browned. Thus treated they will eke out the luncheon for two Julia has in her mind's eye.

Cabbage and beans, minced, would be a valuable addition to the soup-stock pot or to today's vegetable soup.

A learned writer upon food values went out of his way lately to animalize upon the "unclean contents of the stock pot." I am at a loss to interpret the phrase when applied to what is so often and so thoroughly cooked as to purify all the ingredients committed to it and to put to flight all fears of malevo-lean meat chopped. Fresh vegetables are added, and the soup kettle is thoroughly cleansed. A certain quantity of the new stock is strained and set aside for clear soups. The rest is the foundation of savory broths, etc. Left-overs of such vegetables as turnips, onions and cabbage, of which but a "dab" remains, go into the stock pot. Ditto with remnants of cooked celery, baked beans, carrots and tomatoes.

TASTE AND INGENUITY

The cook who has made the composition of nourishing and palatable soups a study will resent with me the aspersions of uncleanness and unwholesomeness cast upon one of the best friends of the household. Taste combines with ingenuity to make the first course of the family dinner one of the most enjoyable and important.

Returning to our "dabs," we note the mashed potato. Julia has enough laid ready to make half a dozen

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' E

"WILL you listen to my tale of woe?" As I write a boy is singing that under my window, and I take up the refrain. Mine may seem in ignoble woe to those who are in real affliction. It is no slight matter to me. Dare I hope that you will lend a sympathizing ear?

I was brought up in the country, and kept very closely at home. My children have been educated far beyond what I ever dreamed of being. My sons, now that they are grown, associate with lawyers, doctors, etc., and wish to bring them here sometimes. Outside of what I read in your corner and in books upon social usages and the like, I know no more how to behave in company than my 4-year-old girl does. Are you too busy to tell me how to act in certain circumstances, as you would a little child?

To begin with, my eldest daughter and I do all the housework. You may not know how hard it is to entertain company in such circumstances. But I don't want my boys to be driven to seek home comfort elsewhere. And I don't want them to be ashamed of their mother and home ways.

1. Our family want to have their coffee poured after they sit down. I can't make the book teachings mix with our old ways. The table gets so crowded when everything is put on, yet we have no waiters.

2. Our hall is narrow. How shall I act when I go to the door? In summer I go ahead into the parlor with the coffee. How about winter, or in cool weather, when the door must be shut after the caller comes in?

3. The new friends whom we have had sit down to table with us are so little! Relatives and family eat heartily, as if the cooking were O. K. Should we insist upon visitors taking that which they refuse?

4. In receiving an introduction what reply should I make when the other person says: "Pleased to meet you?" My 15-year-old girl says she never catches the name in her fear lest the other may say: "I am pleased to meet you" before she has a chance to get it out.

Please instruct me as you would a little child.

My boys could entertain their new acquaintances at a hotel, but my girls, when they get older, could not.

I am afraid I have not expressed myself plainly. My education was limited, you see, and I have not much choice of words.

Let me set your mind at rest on one point: you have told your tale of woe well, with no waste of words, and even graphically. I comprehend your position all the better because I have heard the same story from other housemothers, and seen it illustrated in homes from which no complaint has come. Our country is full of households in which the children have risen above their parents, so far as schooling and external refinement stand for superiority. When—as happens in eighty per cent. of such cases—the parents have forgotten how to learn new ways, and lost the power of adaptation to changed conditions, heartaches are inevitable and humiliations many.

There need be none of these with you. You wish to learn, and are not "set in your ways."

Take your queries in detail:

1. Have the coffee equipage on the table. Arrange the cups, etc., upon a tray at the head of the table, and set the coffee pot with them, covering it with a wadded "cozy" to keep it hot.

2. Step to the rear of the visitor, with a pleasant word of explanation, close the door and, still chatting, precede her to the parlor. I knew one cottage dweller whose staircase ran down so near to the front door that she had to step upon the bottom stair to let her callers pass into the house after she opened the door. She made a jest of the situation, even declaring to me that she "rather liked it!" It offered a peg upon which to hang conversation.

3. The few friends honored by the invitation to sit at your hospitable board would have showed better breeding if they had pretended hunger when they did not feel it. I feel strongly upon this subject, so strongly as to assert here and elsewhere that "finical" eaters should stay at home at mealtimes, or go to hotels. When a woman asks me to take a meal in her house, it is my duty to eat of that which is set before me, whether I like it or not. I owe it to the genius of hospitality to sacrifice personal caprice to the comfort of my hosts. You proved yourself the true lady—gentlewoman—in not pressing upon them the food they rejected. They were not obliged to partake of each dish. It was downright rudeness to refuse a majority of them.

4. When the other party to the introduction forestalls you in the conventional "I am happy to meet you!" reply simply, "Thank you!" and I am glad to meet you!" emphasizing the last word slightly. Or a gracious intonation of the simple "Thank you!" is usually sufficient. Avoid stiffness on the one side and familiarity on the other. Above all, do not try so hard to seem at ease with the stranger as to become patronizing. That is the rock upon which many novices in social usages split. Patronage of anybody—be it President or bootblack—is underbred.

Finally, keep your eyes and ears open and put into practice what you learn. It is plain to read between the lines of your letter that you are at heart a gentlewoman. Rest serenely upon this persuasion, and ingraft upon the customs of your modest home such new "ways" as are compatible with even-tempered living. Don't ape the fashions of people who—albeit no better born or bred than yourself—have more money to spend upon the appointments and habits of house and table.

I have devoted much space to consid-

Our Daily Bread

Takes More Than a Good Breakfast to Equip a Man for the Day's Business.

"Give us this day our daily bread,"—Matt. vii. 11.

There is something strikingly pathetic in the thought that the most familiar petition in the prayer most commonly used among all prayers is the one in which we cry, "Give us this day our daily bread." It is the cry of the child looking up to the Father, full and waiting for food for the present.

None has caught the spirit of this prayer who has thought that such a petition made daily food unnecessary; who has thought of its longing about that condition of life, ideal to many, in which the needed needs would fall in the heavens as the suitable seasons fall between sheep and the purgation of pleasure.

The spirit of the prayer puts a higher significance into these simple words. Each day comes with its deep needs, its heavy cares, its high possibilities, its trying duties, its splendid joys, and we ask not for three meals or five, but for all that the day may have we may find sufficient strength and sustenance.

It takes more than a good breakfast to equip a man for the day's business. It takes a tracing of the will, some uplift of the heart; it takes some inner impulse and power that helps us to see the glory of a new day, to feel the thrill of its possibilities, to face it with delight, and to find in it every good and every noble thing it may have for us.

There are hours every day when the inner light flares dim, when the heart seems to flicker and almost faint, when despair creeps over us and comes up like a bewildering mist, when cynicism's cold fingers lay themselves heavily on our warm faith in our fellows. Such periods of depression and doubt become habitual with some; they serve to block every high endeavor. These hours simply mean that the inner life needs its daily bread; that for the high business of living, for the soul's service in the world, we need the food of the spiritual life. The advice to read a good and noble thought every day, as some poem, and to see some good picture or to get an elevating strain of music every day is as simple and practical as the advice to take your meals regularly.

The physical plays a large part in life, but it does not play the largest. Or, if it does, then there are reaches of this physical that are not to be explored by material observation nor satisfied with material supplies. You can afford to neglect no need of your nature, no aspect of your life. A heartache is just as real as an ache in the empty stomach.

The tragedy of all our lives is that we seek to satisfy them with the bread that perishes; divine as they are, we seek to tie them down to the dust. We shut out heaven and cry aloud in despair that earth is so dark and its tasks so irksome. Life becomes hopeless, as it seems to be empty of things to satisfy the higher life.

Yet this daily bread is not some manna to fall from the skies, is not some peculiar privilege belonging to a few choice souls.

IT IS TO BE HAD FOR THE TAKING.

Our great heritage of cheering thoughts, of noble ideals, of visions that elevate and inspire, is at the same time the cheapest and the richest thing obtainable.

To those who look for beauty every common bush is soon aflame with God; to those who look for love, how wonderfully rich is our poor humanity in gentle kindness, in tender service, in deep, thrilling sacrifices! They who walk the common ways of life, mingling with men and doing this world's material tasks, find, if they but have the open mind, that which gives them faith and strength for their daily living and for higher endeavor.

What though the hands be tied to tedious tasks, may not the heart go out in memory of the best thoughts that have ever come to the race, in imagination of heroic scenes, in aspiration after the best? May not the will respond to every stimulus and aspiration to greater life? May not our hearts feed on those things that have made men brave and Godlike in the past?

Is not this our deep need? Is not this the bread we ought daily to desire? For what is life to any of us if it be no more than the feeding of this outer shell, and what may it not become if it be the nurturing of the whole being by those ideals, and passions, and service that have most mightily moved our race in days gone by?

BIG CONTRACT.

"If Smithers undertakes to pull my ears," said a fellow at a street corner, "he'll have his hands full."

The crowd looked at the man's ears and smiled.

Potato Biscuits.
Lay upon a pastry board and run the rolling pin over the "dab" until it is a smooth sheet. Put it into a bowl and work into it a few tablespoonfuls of warmed milk—not scalded!—add a teaspoonful of melted butter, a little salt and flour for a soft dough. Transfer to the board, roll out quickly with as few cut strokes as possible into a sheet less than half an inch thick, and cut into round cakes. As soon as they are done, butter and pile one upon another. Eat hot.
John will not ask for any other bread if you have potato biscuits fresh from the oven for his luncheon.
Skin the two baked potatoes, and cut into dice. Heat a little butter in the frying-pan and make for another dish.

Potatoes a la Lyonnaise.
Slice a small onion and fry in butter. Strain the latter and put back into the pan. When hot, stir in the potatoes with a fork, and as they cook, turn them with the same. This keeps them from getting "mushy." Mix in a teaspoonful of minced parsley as soon as the potatoes are hot. Cook for two minutes longer, and dish.
N. B.—Never put potatoes into the stock pot.
Come we now to the most popular form into which we can metamorphose vegetable left-overs.

Vegetable Salads.
Cut the celery into inch lengths, after scraping it well. Mix it with the carrots which John loves and Julia does not. Toss the two together with a fork. This will loosen and not break them. Cut a tart, well-flavored apple into small pieces when you have pared and cored it, and toss up with carrots and celery. I wish you had a few nut-meats to add, or a "dab" of green peas or of string beans. None of these comes amiss in the composition of a "Macedoine salad." Arrange a bed of crisp lettuce leaves in a chilled glass bowl; turn in the vegetables and pour over them a mayonnaise dressing.
A French dressing will do if you have not time for the mayonnaise. Try this for a change:

Quick Salad Dressing.
Stir together a teaspoonful of French mustard, a saltspoonful of salt and the same of pepper, a teaspoonful of white sugar, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and five of salad oil. Continue to stir with a silver spoon or a silver fork until you have a smooth emulsion. Add, at the last, a teaspoonful of minced chives.

PROGRESS OF SCIENCE

NOTABLE ACHIEVEMENTS DURING THE PAST YEAR.

Mostly Along Practical Lines—Engineering, Physics, Photography, Chemistry.

There has been little sensational to mark the progress of science during the last twelve months. The attention of the public has been chiefly directed towards principles, or, rather, to the practical utilization of instruments already designed.
Thus, considerable interest has attached to Dr. Schlick's successful demonstration of the steadying action of a gyroscope on the rolling of a ship at sea; to Mr. Brannan's working model of a mono-railway, which owes the stability attained in the cars to the presence of two gyroscopes revolving in opposite directions; and to the successful installation by Marconi of a trans-Atlantic wireless telegraphy apparatus.
Among other notable instances of applied science are achievements such as the wireless telephone, the new instrument for transmitting pictures and photographs by telegraphy, and the building of the Lusitania and Mauretania, which have succeeded in reducing the time record of trans-Atlantic travel.

REVOLUTIONARY DISCOVERIES.

In pure theory, the experiments of Sir William Ramsay on radium phenomena and his expressed belief that he has succeeded in accomplishing the transmutation of elements have fascinated those who are at all interested in the constitution of matter. The results which are expected from the work that is now being done on a comparatively large amount of radium salt at Vienna are being awaited with very great interest.
It will be remembered that among other claims, Sir William Ramsay believes that he has succeeded in degrading the copper in a solution of copper sulphate into the first member of its group, lithium, and also into sodium by subjecting it to the influence of radium emanation.
The question of atomic disintegration is receiving greater attention year by year, and the results obtained from a mass of laborious research are of very great theoretical importance. A number of workers even urge that such well-established doctrines as the indestructibility of matter and of energy should be definitely abandoned.

BACTERIOLOGY.

The bacteriologists can claim the earliest recognition for their valuable work in Malta. The abandonment of goats' milk as an article of diet by all Europeans has entirely eliminated Maltese fever, and made the island one of the healthiest and most popular stations in the Mediterranean. More evidence has been brought to show that the rat flea is responsible for the dissemination of plague in India; knowledge has been accumulated on sleeping sickness; advance has been made in its early diagnosis, and experiments are being conducted in the hopes of discovering a remedy.
Antimony is one of the latest drugs that have been employed. It has been shown that typhoid bacilli may remain dormant for several years in a person who has suffered from the disease, and an epidemic may thus be started by an individual who has apparently long been cured. Anti-typhoid inoculation is being widely practised in Germany.

BOTANY.

Botanists report the discovery of a new natural order of flowering plants, the Juhaniaceae, which was determined by Mr. Hensley, of the Kew Herbarium. Professor Bottomley has succeeded in

11. Layeth down—Lift, "puts aside" his life, esteeming it of less value than the sheep for which it is given.

12. Hireling—One who serves for pay alone.

The wolf—A common danger to sheep in Palestine in our Lord's time.

Snatcheth—The older or authorized version uses the word "catcheth" which long ago conveyed much the same meaning as does our word "snatcheth" at present. The meanings of words in a living or spoken language are necessarily continually changing, which fact constitutes one great factor in making necessary new versions of the Bible from time to time. The snatching of one sheep from the flock would naturally frighten and scatter the rest.

13. Careth not for the sheep—Since he has personally nothing at stake in their destruction.

15. Even as the Father knoweth me—With a perfect, intimate, personal acquaintance.

16. Other sheep I have—The figure at this point may be variously interpreted. Some commentators suggest that Jesus here refers to "Gentiles, unconnected with the Jewish fold"; others hold that his reference is here to such as would in the future hear of him and believe on him without reference to distinction of nationality.

One flock—Note the distinction between the words "flock" and "fold," which was not brought out by the earlier, or King James, version, but which is clearly marked in the Greek.

17. Therefore—On account of his fulfilling the part of a shepherd to the human race.

That I may take it again—In his death the Good Shepherd does not leave his flock defenceless. He will take life again, and this also for the sake of his sheep. His power over life and death, together with his love secures to those who are his life, freedom, and abundance which he came to bring.

18. No one taketh it away—Margin, "took it away," as if referring to the eternal decree of God. Both from eternity and now in the midst of human enemies Christ's surrender of his life is wholly voluntary, compelled neither by a higher decree of the Father nor by the hatred of men.

This commandment—Or, "right." Both the surrender and the taking again of his life are part of the divine plan of redemption which his infinite love and that of the Father have made possible. If the translation "commandment" be the correct one, we must still think of Christ's voluntary surrender of his own life and glory with the Father as preceding this commandment. While in the flesh Jesus subordinated himself to the Father and obeyed implicitly his bidding, thus becoming our example in perfect obedience.

been cured. Anti-lyphoid inoculation is being widely practised in Germany.

BOTANY.

Botanists report the discovery of a new natural order of flowering plants, the Julianiaceae, which was determined by Mr. Hensley, of the Kew Herbarium. Professor Bottomley has succeeded in inoculating tomatoes and certain cereals with nitrogenizing bacteria similar to those of leguminous plants, and has thus discovered a fresh means of adding nitrogen to the soil. It may well be that this discovery will prove as important as that of the three-fold system in agriculture. Improvements of importance have been made by hybridization in the sugar cane and in wheat.

PHYSICS.

Physicists and chemists have little of popular interest to record beyond the work done by Sir William Ramsay and others on radium phenomena. From a practical standpoint, however, there has been valuable research done on the elasticity of iron, on various new experimental alloys, on the strength of metals at varying temperatures, and so forth. Dr. Emil Fischer has synthesized a fresh number of proteins, and a new doctrine of valency has been suggested. There have been further speculations on the constitution of the ether.

The earthquakes in Jamaica, Mexico, Turkestan and Calabria have added new material for seismological research.

Photography continues to develop, and Mr. Powrie has brought out a new color process, which enables a colored photograph to be taken by a single exposure. The use of the cadmium (ultra violet) spark, will, it appears, make it possible to obtain exact photograph of ultra-microscopic objects.

The statement made by Professors Elster and Zeitel that radium emanation is present in the fire damp of mines in a proportion about six to eight times that which is found in the ordinary air of coal mines will prove of interest, especially if it is confirmed by subsequent observers. In that case, the gold-leaf electroscope would become a part of the ordinary equipment of a mine, and would at once reveal the presence of danger.

NEW APPLIANCE.

Scientific appliances are so important to the advancement of science that no apology is necessary for mentioning the vessels of rhodium, iridium and of fused silica that have been manufactured in Great Britain during the last year.

The rhodium and iridium flasks resist high temperatures, and the action of acids, while fused silica is a valuable substitute for glass under similar conditions. It may be heated white hot and plunged into water without cracking or being otherwise injured.

MAY BE OLDEST OF TEMPLES.

Building Unearthed in Babylonia Contains Bricks of 4500 B. C.

The oldest temple in the world, so far discovered, has been unearthed by excavators at Bisyra, in central Babylonia.

The walls of the tower were first uncovered and the summit cleared. The first inscription on the surface was on a brick stamped with the name Dungi, which goes back to 2750 B. C. A little lower appeared a crumpled piece of gold with the name Param Sim, who lived in 3750 B. C. Just below were large square bricks peculiar to the reign of Sargon, 3800 B. C., and who was probably the first Semitic King of Babylonia.

A large platform was discovered two and a half yards below the surface which was constructed of peculiar convex bricks such as were used in building material 4500 B. C.

Making "Pone"

I am truly sorry for the Allentown member if she should attempt to make cornbread for her "Dixie" husband from kiln-dried corn meal.

Your recipe for old-time water-ground meal is all right, but if the bread were made of "bolted" meal it would be an egregious failure. I offer my recipe for "pone" made from bolted or kiln-dried meal.

Measure the meal, pour over it (having salted it lightly) boiling water into which has been put a pinch of soda. Scald the meal with enough water to dampen half of it. Then work to a stiff dough with cold water. Wet your hands with cold water, and form the dough into egg-shaped pones, tossing back and forth until you have the right form. Set a greased pan on top of the stove. Lay the pones in it, and leave it there until it is browned underneath. Then set upon the upper grating of the oven and brown quickly. Colored baked slowly is "soggy." Regulate the quantity of boiling water by the quality of meal used. Cream or pearl meal requires less. If scalded too much, the meal will be gummy. If too little, it will not mix and be hard to handle.

If I failed to state that the recipe for Virginia pone, given by me, should be made of water-ground meal,

I hereby tender an apology. The water-ground meal may be bought in most of our large cities at the North. It is a very different thing from the bolted, or kiln-dried, and, to the taste of those who have eaten cornbread at the South in its various forms, inferior in lightness and in flavor. The water-ground product is always white.

Brightening Willow Chairs

Kindly aid a perplexed housewife by inserting in the Exchange directions for washing or brightening willow chairs. Mine is perfectly good, but soiled by being stored a long time. I should prefer to wash it, but if this may not be done satisfactorily how shall I color it? Or is there a varnish that is not sticky? I shall watch the Exchange for a reply. I am anxious to do it at once.

Dust the chair carefully with a soft cloth. Then, with another wrung out in kerosene, go all over it, not skipping a single cane or curve. If this does not clean it, have it painted, then varnished by a man who knows his business. I have a pair of lounging chairs of willowware which were painted and varnished twenty years ago, and have not needed retouching since, although in active use for six months out of the twelve.

THE S. S. LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, APRIL 5.

Lesson I. Jesus the Good Shepherd.

Golden Text, John 10. 11.

THE LESSON WORD STUDIES.

(Based on the text of the Revised Version.)

A Familiar Figure.—The lessons of this quarter deal with the closing events of Christ's ministry, most of which occurred in and near the capital city of Jerusalem. The two miracles the raising of Lazarus and the resurrection of Jesus, bring the apostles' record of "signs" proving the divinity of Jesus to a culmination. In view of the fact that these two wonderful records of Christ's power and victory over death are to be studied in the regular course of lessons for this quarter no special lesson is offered for Easter Sunday (April 19). It will be appropriate, however, to make next Sunday's lesson, "The Raising of Lazarus," the basis for further discussion on the following Sunday. In several succeeding lessons we shall study portions of the longer discourses which Jesus delivered shortly before his passion. These discourses also witness to the character and divinity of Jesus, as did the events though miracles about which we shall study. From one of these discourses the text of our present lesson is taken. Shepherding was a familiar occupation to Orientals. A shepherd went before his flock, seeking out the best pasturage for the sheep; he watched over these and defended them from wolves and other foes; he brought them safely back to the fold for the night, not seldom carrying a tired sheep or feeble lamb in his arms. Each individual sheep knew the shepherd and was known by him by name. It was natural, therefore, for the Jews to think of the providential care of Jehovah for his people under the figure of a tender shepherd, and it is this well-known figure which Jesus adopts and develops in order to make plain one aspect of his character in relation to his followers. The details of this application are the subject of our study in the present lesson.

Verse 1. Verily, verily.—A form of solemn emphasis with which Jesus introduces his statement concerning himself. This formula is usually used, not at the beginning, but in the middle of a discourse or conversation, where it serves to introduce some profound truth, or to emphasize a reply. Used at the end of a statement or discourse the Greek expression here used is translated more literally, being rendered by our English word amen.

Door.—Or, gate.

Climbth up some other way.—Forcing his way into the fold without right or permission.

3. The porter.—The doorkeeper or

A WOMAN THOUGH QUEEN

ALEXANDRA OF ENGLAND FEMINE IN HER CHARM.

Likes to Wear Magnificent Jewels — Princess of Wales of Another Type.

The greatest appeal that Queen Alexandra makes to her immediate household as well as to her subjects is the appeal of perfect womanliness. She has all the feminine weaknesses which are said to be fast disappearing in her sex—a desire to keep young, a love of dress and jewels, a vanity which prompts her to read all that is written about her in England at any rate, a tender heart and boundless sympathy, writes a London correspondent.

An American who was summoned to a private audience at the palace the other day said that the thing which most impressed him about the Queen was her air of motherliness, a sort of gentle protecting manner with also a tact appeal to chivalry in it.

There is no more devoted mother in all the country than Queen Alexandra has been, no more tender daughter than she was to Queen Victoria, and no more loyal wife. Besides these characteristics her desire is to bestow an almost universal charity, which has to be modified by those who take charge of the money she wishes to distribute.

The love of what is beautiful in art makes the Queen choose her gowns and those of her only unmarried daughter with more than the usual woman's interest in dresses as dresses. To the first lady in the land soft fabrics, all possess an artistic value aside from their charm as adornments.

DAINTY LACES AND RICH FURS

Queen Alexandra sometimes spends half a morning choosing a combination of colors for a reception gown and the jewels which shall help to set it off. All of which seems rather strange when one stops to consider the extreme simplicity of her life and dress in her girlhood days in Denmark.

At the courts the Queen is ablaze with precious stones, and at the first of these functions this season, when mourning was necessary, her black face gown was relieved by the rope of pearls she always wears on state occasions. This magnificent necklace is part of the Hanoverian crown heirlooms, and consists of five ropes of pearls varying in size from those as large as hazelnuts to those as small as peas. The ropes are of different lengths; the longest, falling below the waist, is finished by two tassels of matchless stones which extend almost to the bottom of the gown.

Underneath this necklace the Queen further concealed the somberness of her corsage by alternate rows of pearl and diamond ornaments. On her head she wore the beautiful all round crown of pearls and diamonds which she prefers of all her crowns. Naturally, with her fair hair and delicately tinted face, amid this collection of jewels, she was a vision of beauty.

These exquisite pearls, as has been said, do not really belong to Queen Alexandra, nor does the crown she wore. They were inherited from Queen Victoria, who settled them upon the royal estate, so they are the Queen's only during the lifetime of her husband, and after that they will go to

THE NEXT QUEEN CONSORT.

One crown, however, Queen Victoria left personally to Alexandra. This is a diamond tiara which rests to a point in the front and, arched at the side, is somewhat fan shaped in design.

Diamonds and pearls are the Queen's favorite jewels, and her most prized brooch is one that was given her by the late Lady Cadogan. It is formed

INVITED ABSCONDING BANKER TO GIVE HIMSELF UP.

Said to Have Taken $500,000 of Depositors' Money—A Police Abuse Exposed.

Were it not for its pathetic side, the case of Waldemar Muller, commissary of criminal police in Berlin, Germany, would deserve to rank side by side with the immortal escapades of the captain of Kopenick as the funniest story of the age. Herr Muller, however, is in retirement at a sanitarium in Saxony for nervous derangement, and smiles are suppressed in commiseration for his sad condition, writes a Berlin correspondent. Before his true state was realized Germany did indulge in a thunderous roar of merriment, for this zealous police official of the Kaiser resorted to the novel method of capturing Siegmund Friedberg, a Berlin banker who is missing along with some $500,000 of his depositors' funds, by issuing an open telegram asking the fugitive to come home and give himself up.

The police commissary appealed to the banker on personal grounds, assuring him that unless his arrest was speedily accomplished the commissary was in grave danger of nervous prostration. Friedberg was supposed to be in hiding in London, so Muller caused his open telegram to be printed in the Daily Mail, hoping thus to catch the fugitive's eye. After 48 hours had passed and Friedberg had had the impoliteness to decline his pursuer's polite invitation to come to jail, Commissary Muller as a police officer and published the following weird communication in the local papers:

"The reasons for my resignation lie in the insuperable conflict raging in my breast between discipline and the dictates of professional responsibility. For years I have tried to effect a compromise between these duties. I have fought and fought. But in order not to wreck finally the best of my powers in this useless struggle a voice within cries, 'Free yourself from these unbearable bonds!' Strenuous days and nights in investigating the Friedberg case have in no way weakened my physical and mental powers. I feel unusually happy and blessed with the joy of work. Whether Friedberg's arrest takes place to-day or to-morrow must recede into the background when the service of the German nation is concerned."

Muller's conduct during the preceding week had been of such an eccentric character that his superiors lost no time in relieving him of duty. Then they proceeded to undo some of the remarkable work he had carried out in his zeal to ferret out the mysteries of Banker Friedberg's peculations. Their first act was to release from jail four persons whom Muller had arrested wholly the banker's lawyer, the fiancée of the bank cashier and the young woman's mother, and the cashier himself. They also released a quantity of jewelry which the strenuous commissary had seized from several of the banker's woman friends, on the ground that the gems represented property paid for with depositors' money.

Muller, who is 37 years old and was formerly a military officer at Bremen, is known among his comrades as the "poet commissary," as he has dabbled in literature and written four or five books and plays. One of his plays, called Locomotive Engineer Klassen, is shortly to be produced at a Berlin theatre. He has been an earnest and successful police official, his superiors say,

STORY OF THE ORANGE

TWO TREES IN CALIFORNIA THE PARENTS OF MILLIONS.

India is the Home of the Orange — The Trees Are Remarkably Fruitful.

At the entrance to the famed Magnolia Avenue at Riverside, California, are to be seen two orange trees. Above all trees these are honored, as the prosperity of a considerable portion of California is largely due to these parent trees. From those two marvellous trees were produced directly or indirectly the whole of the orange trees in Riverside, trees which cover some thirty acres of groves; in fact, the whole of the Los Angeles district sends away by rail each year 350,000 tons of oranges and lemons. These oranges are the famous seedless oranges, known the world over.

Riverside owes its existence to oranges. Not much more than a generation ago this town was simply the haunt of cattle, and even as a grazing ground it was poor owing to the absence of water. A number of progressive men came along and thought that the place could produce oranges. They commenced digging irrigation canals and planting orange seedlings, but their venture was a complete failure.

At this time, when things were at their blackest, one of the planters received a couple of orange trees which had been imported from Brazil. These trees grew and multiplied to a marvellous extent. They were without pips and of excellent size and quality.

Buds were taken from these trees and grafted on the stock of ordinary orange trees grown from seedlings, so that in a short time there were a number of trees at Riverside which produced the seedless orange.

FIRES TO KEEP THE FRUIT WARM.

The culture has achieved the proportions of an exact science. Water channels lined with cement are to be found all over the groves, which are irrigated at stated periods the whole year round. To such a degree is the culture carried that the growers even go so far as to provide warm fires to keep the groves at a good temperature when the surrounding districts are at freezing point.

The fruit is picked during the winter months mainly by Japanese. The produce is taken to the packing house, where the oranges are cleaned, separated into various classes, covered with tissue-paper wrappers by means of marvellous machinery, and packed into cases.

The Los Angeles neighborhood dispatches 200 truck loads of oranges daily throughout the picking season.

Orange trees are remarkably fruitful. In fact, a tree 20 feet high, occupying a space of little more than 12 feet in diameter, may yield from 3,000 to 4,000 oranges in a year. There is one tree in Florida which has frequently yielded 10,000 oranges in a single season. The tree lives to an age of 100 to 150 years, and the young are less productive than the old.

India is the home of the orange, and thence it spread into Western Asia and Europe. It grows in all parts where the climate is warm enough, thriving best in subtropical climates. The great orange-growing districts of the world, however, appear to be Florida, Louisiana and California.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Interesting Gossip About Some of the World's Leading People.

The Kaiser's moustache, in its present form, dates back to 1894. It was a development of that individuality which he definitely assumed upon his accession in 1888, although the credit of the actual "discovery" must be given to the Kaiser's own private perruquier, who, in the early weeks of its existence, had to be in close attendance at Court to keep the moustache in place. No fashion has more completely changed the physiognomy of a people, for every good German has since considered it his bounden duty to pay to his Emperor the compliment of the sincerest form of flattery.

A pretty story is told concerning the Countess of Dudley, in which the dramatic personae included two well-known Japanese jugglers, who were giving a performance at a London music-hall, and a canary which constituted a part of their stock-in-trade. The Countess occupied a seat in the stalls, and during the performance one of the little birds, after hovering round the auditorium for some time, gently flew down and perched on her lap. When an attendant came forward to claim the bird the Countess begged to be permitted to keep it, and the manager having given his consent Lord Dudley promptly constructed a tiny cage out of his programme, and in this the little songster was safely conveyed to his house in Carlton House Terrace.

Although her fortune has been estimated at $15,000,000, the late Baroness A. de Rothschild lived a most simple and unassuming life. The most exquisite dishes were served at her table and the rarest wines set before her guests, but she scarcely touched them. In later years she hardly even made use of her equipages. It was quite a usual thing to see her take the tram which passed her gate, running from Geneva to Versoix. The guards all knew her, and used to point her out sometimes to the other travellers. After she had seen all the splendor which wealth and a high social position can secure, the Baroness seemed to be more convinced than anyone of the vanity of riches and earthly magnificence. Her desire seemed to be to live like the humble, and find peace and happiness in the routine of their ordinary lives.

Mr. Justin McCarthy is now living in quiet retirement at Westgate-on-Sea, England, and his withdrawal from active literary life has been a distinct loss. No man of our time has seen more of life than this brilliant Irishman. He has known every man worth knowing in the Victorian era. It must seem an age to Mr. McCarthy since he caught his first glimpse of London. The Crystal Palace was in Hyde Park then, and the Duke of Wellington was walking down Whitehall in his blue coat and duck trousers. Lord John Russell was passing Reform Bill; Dickens, Carlyle, Thackeray, John Bright, and the young Victorians were in their prime. The young reporter knew them all. Mr. McCarthy has written novels, histories, and poems too many to remember.

Sir W. B. Richmond, R. A., is one of the most interesting artists of the time. He has the ugliness as much as he hates noise, and equals Ruskin in his antipathy to the unlovely in life. He also stands for pure air in London, and smoke is his abomination. No man is more ready to lend a helping hand to struggling genius. It is Sir William's proud boast that when he is at home he has as guest and student every "discovered" Sunday a poor factory boy who has a gift for drawing. He it was who "discovered" Austin O. Spare, the remarkable painter-prodigy. The famous Royal Academician was himself one of London's boy prodigies more than fifty years ago, when he astonished his relations by cartooning them upon doors, walls, tables, and window frames—upon anything, in fact, which would bear the touch of his pencil.

One crown, however, Queen Victoria left personally to Alexandra. This is a diamond tiara which rises to a point in the front and, projecting at the side, is somewhat fan shaped in design.

Diamonds and pearls are the Queen's favorite jewels, and her most prized brooch is one that was given her by the late Lady Cadogan. It is formed of a single pearl of great size and wonderful lustre which was found in an oyster taken from the oyster beds at Clifden in Ireland.

Besides all her dog collars, ropes, rings and earrings of precious stones the Queen possesses many jeweled orders which serve to enhance the beauty of her gowns when worn on state occasions. (Since she always is careful to wear the order which will harmonize with the color of her dress. There is the deep blue of the ribbon of the Garter fastened with diamonds. The Garter itself is worn high up on the left arm with its motto in jewelled lettering.

Then there is the Portuguese order of Santa Isabel, which is a rose and white ribbon with the diamond buckle, and there many others with varying colors and jewels and representing many countries.

No woman in the world has her vanity more assiduously administered to than England's Queen. The papers vie with one another in serving her with accounts of her beauty, her taste, her grace, etc., which must pall a little sometimes even on the recipient of these rhapsodies.

But she never disappoints those who admire her charms. For at each public function she always appears in a gown which is

A MARVEL OF SKILL AND BEAUTY, and always she preserves a girlish figure, blond hair, and a youthful face though her children are reaching middle age and her grandchildren are multiplying fast.

England's next Queen, the Princess of Wales, is a direct and abject contrast to Alexandra. Already her face shows lines of care and anxiety. Eyes which come to many women with the lagging of child bearing and child rearing, but while her eyes lack the gentle, placid sweetness of the Queen's, hers is nevertheless a pleasing, strong, intelligent face.

She carries very little of beautiful jewelry and generally wears a neat and except at state affairs. Her gowns are always simple and her collar is very high. She feels very strongly that women in high places should be an example to the rest of womankind and that extravagance in dress is bad taste and a bad precedent to follow.

It was one of the Princess that the extreme severity of the gown she wore at some charity gathering had been noted, and her answer was that she considered it inappropriate to go very splendidly dressed to a fête given in the name of charity.

Like the Queen the Princess of Wales gives largely, subscribing in fact to all the charitable organizations which make demands upon her. She is said to take a great interest in the woman suffrage movement and is a frequent visitor and an earnest listener at the House of Parliament.

In fact, if the Queen represents all that is delicate and lovable in the type of woman of years ago, the Princess stands for all that is of the thoroughly in earnest and down to earth thinking in the twentieth century woman. Yet English wiserogues shake their heads and say, "She will never have the place in the hearts of her people which her Majesty has maintained since she first came to England as a bride."

"Isn't John a believer in the faith cure?" "He is." "Is it true that he wouldn't have a doctor for his wife, the other day, when she was ill?" "It is quite true." "Well, I saw a doctor go into his house just now." "Oh, that's all right. He's ill now himself."

Muller, who is 37 years old and was formerly a military officer at Bremen, is known among his comrades as the "poet commissary," as he has dabbled in literature and written four or five books and plays. One of his plays, called Locomotive Engineer Klassen, is shortly to be produced at a Berlin theatre. He has been an earnest and successful police official, his superiors say, and his eccentricities in the Friedberg case are ascribed to overwrought nervous and for aught on by his excessive and sleepless labors. He worked day and night at the bank premises, snatching time for meals and sleep at various odd hours, and never getting out of his clothes, he says.

FOR ELEVEN DAYS AND NIGHTS.

Prolonged rest, he thinks, will make him as sound as ever, physically and mentally, but he says a policeman's lot is not a happy one and that he will hereafter devote himself exclusively to the more congenial pastime of book and play-writing.

His case has a serious and disquieting side—that of the ease with which police officers in Prussia may make arrests and throw people into prison. No sort of advance inquiry is necessary, and the whim of a commissary like Muller may result in landing the most innocent of persons in a cell for an indefinite number of days or even weeks before chance is given to establish one's innocence. This aspect of the Friedberg case is attracting wide attention in Germany, and if it results in remedial action which will a little more guarantee liberty and the pursuit of happiness in the Kaiser's domain, the broken-hearted commissary who would eliminate all the police methods and simply invite criminals to go to jail, will have made himself imperishably famous.

CHURCHILL'S RHINOCEROS HUNT.

The English M. P. Tells of Wild Game of Africa.

Mr. Winston Churchill thus writes of his experience in South Africa—

After Malakuta Station there is a wonderful spectacle—the plains are crowded with wild animals. From the windows of the carriage the whole zoological gardens can be seen disporting itself. Herds of antelopes and gazelle, troops of zebras—sometimes four or five hundred together—watch the train pass with placid assurance, or scamper a hundred yards farther away, and turn again. Many are quite close to the line. . . . At Nakuru six yellow lions walked in leisurely mood across the rails in broad daylight.

Mr. Churchill tells "an interesting story of a rhinoceros hunt. Two monsters were seen, and the hunter crept to a distance of 120 yards. "At such a range it is easy to hit so great a target, but the bull's eye is small. I fired. The third of a bullet which smokes with an impact of a ton and a quarter, tearing through hide and muscle and bone, with the hideous entry of gorilla, came back distinctly. The large rhinoceros started, shambled, turned directly toward the sound and the blow, and then bore straight down upon us in a peculiar trot, nearly as fast as a horse's gallop."

The death of the huge beast is described thus: "Here at the end is only a hide, a horn, and a carcass, over which the vultures have already begun to wheel."

"Oh, what is a political leader?" "A man who is able to see which way the crowd is going, and follows with loud whoops in that direction."

"I suppose," remarked Knox, sarcastically, "that you're busy with your social functions as usual?" "Oh, yes," replied Cholly, wearily; "but I'm beginning to discover, don't you know, that society is a deuced bore." "Well, well, most of us discovered that about your society long ago."

AUSTRALIA'S LOST OPPORTUNITY.

It is grown to great perfection in Queensland and South West Australia, but for some reason or other it is not cultivated there on a commercial scale for competition in the markets of the world, and, of course, it is extensively grown in the South of Europe, the most common of all oranges being the Portugal or Lisbon orange.

Probably the favorite oranges are those from St. Michael's and from Malta, though these oranges cannot compare to the Mandarin from China, and the naval from South America; these latter are nearly double the size of the ordinary orange. The oranges intended for the export market are always gathered before they are ripe.

The China orange is receiving more and more attention; it has a smooth, thin rind, and very abundant juice. Then there are all manner of other oranges such as the egg, the blood, the Jiffa, and the seedless Majorca orange. The Mandarin orange is a fruit which is much broader than long, and the rind is only very loosely attached; it is like the Tangerine.

A very curious description is the Kun-quat, which is obtained from China, Japan, and Australia; this curious orange is little bigger than a gooseberry. The Seville orange used for marmalade is well known.

There are uses for every part of the orange tree, from making medicines to decorating the head-dress of brides. Even the small green oranges which fall from the trees are not wasted. These are collected and dried, and used in making liqueurs.—Pearson's Weekly.

SWALLOWED 75 PINS.

Girl Who Was Human Pincushion and Needle Case.

Three remarkable cases are recorded in the Lancet of people who have swallowed needles. One of them related to a lady who 30 years ago received a needle in her left foot, an event which she had forgotten until at the end of last year it presented itself in her right elbow and was easily removed. Another case referred to a lady who had broken off a needle in the first joint of her left thumb. Dr. Campbell Black searched for it unsuccessfully, but a year later she felt a pricking sensation in the right forefinger, and, having broken the skin, she without difficulty removed the greater portion of the lost needle from the point of the finger. The other remarkable case was under the care of Dr. G. Wright Hutchinson. The patient was a healthy girl, aged 20, who was in the habit of putting pins in her mouth, and sometimes had been known to fall asleep without removing them. She was admitted to the hospital, having swallowed five pins accidentally, and by the help of emetics she was relieved of them. Returning home, she began regularly to vomit pins, and got rid of 25 in the course of a month. She then began to produce needles, and in a fortnight 13 came out from the following situations—the left nostril, behind the left ear, and a spot on the front of the right forearm; at the same time she continued vomiting pins until 75 had appeared. Two of the needles were threaded with about three inches of thread.

Queen Maud of Norway has been described as one of the cleverest members of the British Royal Family. She is talented beyond the average, reads hard, writes both prose and poetry, and speaks five languages fluently. Then she knows many minor arts and crafts, sews and spins well, can carve wood, bind a book, take a photograph, knit a stocking, play chess, and use a typewriter. And Queen Maud is a good athlete, rides well, can sail a boat, pull an oar, skate cleverly, and has of late taken up the pastime of skiing. She is also a keen cyclist, and may often be seen wheeling about the lanes near Sandringham. Children are one of her greatest interests. The story goes that once, when a school class was under examination for her amusement, she took a shy little girl on her knee, and the child's answers instantly showed a marked improvement. The secret, however, came out later on, when the little one said to her teacher, "Please, ma'am, the lady told me what to say."

The death of Sir Henry Colville has removed from the British Army a man of many tastes and talents. Soldier, surveyor, balloonist, explorer, author, yachtsman, and photographer, he seemed able to turn a ready hand and facile brain to the most unexpected tasks; and the one clouded spot of a brilliant record is that Boer War incident at Lindley, the ultimate result of which was that General Colville was placed on half-pay. Years ago, before ballooning became a fashionable pastime, Sir Henry had made a deep study of aerodynamics, and one of his many ascents was on the occasion of his marriage, when he spent the first day of his honeymoon in navigating a big balloon from the Crystal Palace to Ely. He was as much at home on the waters of the Channel as he was in the air, and on one occasion, when serving in the Guards, he paddled a canoe from Dover to Calais in half-a-dozen hours. Sir Henry was also a lover of the dramatic art, and he has written two or three plays, one of the best of these being "The Nick of Time." The Guards' play at Chelsea Barracks last year.

STORY OF OLD BILLY.

Famous English Gin Horse Stopped Work at 59 Years of Age.

Old Billy was a gin horse belonging to the Mersey and Irwell Navigation Co., and continued at his work until May, 1819, he being at that time 59 years of age, says the Manchester Guardian.

His last days were spent in the enjoyment of a well earned rest on a farm at Latchford. It was hoped that he would walk in the procession in Manchester to celebrate the coronation of George IV., but he was too old, and would not leave the stable. He died Nov. 22, 1822, in his 62nd year.

About 25 years later his head, carefully preserved, was presented by the navigation company to the museum in King street, and was transferred with the rest of the collection to Peter street.

When, in 1867, the greater portion of the collection was handed over to the Owens College authorities, some of the specimens were sold by auction. It is highly probable that Old Billy's head was among them.

A sentimental poet writes: "How can I meet my darling?" After some deliberation over the question we have come to the conclusion that he can meet her by approaching her from an opposite direction.

PROBLEMS OF TAILORS

CLOTHING HAS A GREAT INFLUENCE ON OUR SPIRITS.

Scientist Says He Thinks Women Ought to Wear Trousers as Well as Men.

Originally men and women were clothed, without expense, in a comfortable covering of hair, and since they lost it more time and labor have been given to supplying substitutes than to any other affair of life.

It is calculated that seventy million people are constantly employed in making and distributing clothes and ornaments for the human body.

Wilfred N. Webb, curator of the Eton (England) College Museum has recently published a work dealing with the effects of clothes on their wearers.

HEAVY CLOTHES, SAD THOUGHTS.

On our spirits, and even on our character, clothing, it appears, has a powerful influence. Heavy clothing causes mental depression. Gauzy stuffs and laces are said to produce feelings of lightheartedness.

Dr. Fiacco made an investigation into the effect of clothing on the pupils of a girls' school, and among other things, found that the style of the hat may determine the mood of the wearer.

"In a large, heavy hat my spirits are low," said one girl. "A broad hat makes me feel jolly." "If my hat is flat on my forehead I feel depressed." "A fancy hat puts me in a coquettish mood." "I feel brighter in a hat that rolls away from my face."

It appears that the whole of our principal attire, masculine and feminine, originated in the shawl. The shawl was first worn as a wrap, then the edges were sewn together and it formed a sleeveless tunic, after that slits were cut in the sides for the arms, next came sleeves, and then the front was cut open and fastened with buttons.

Thus came into existence the man's coat and vest and the woman's bodice and jacket. Another shawl worn on the lower part of the body developed into the petticoat and skirt, and when sewn up the middle became a pair of trousers.

TROUSERS FOR WOMEN.

Mr. Webb seems to think that the trousers, being later in development than the petticoat, is the superior garment, and one day will be the fashionable wear of women.

Gymnastics and outdoor work and exercise are working a revolution in girls' dress. When lady gardeners were first employed at Kew Gardens, the director had to issue an order concerning dress suitable to the occupation.

It was found that the long skirt damaged the plants, and the ladies readily adopted the divided garment, wearing an apron which covers it to some extent. But it is to the rising generation we must look for any radical change. And already in girls' schools a knickerbocker costume has come into use, and, curiously, is much better liked than the long dress.

COLORS FOR MEN.

The need for more color in men's wear has often been urged. Men really like color, and use it whenever they get the opportunity. A desirable reform is suggested by a custom which prevailed in Cornwall many years ago.

"When they go a-wooing," says a writer in the "Spectator," "whether they have any post in the militia or not, they put on a red coat." Why can't we do this? A man ought to appear at his best on such an occasion, and, as the clothes would indicate the object of his visit, he would be relieved of the most embarrassing part

THREE PAST EXISTENCES

SAW PREVIOUS LIVES IN HYPNOTIC SLEEP.

Marvelous Case of French Girl—Could Remember Before She Was Born.

Some wonderful results, seeming to throw some light on the problems of reincarnation have recently been attained through the medium of a young French woman, Mlle. Marie Mayo Cyriame.

She was the daughter of a French engineer, who, having passed a part of his life in constructing railways in the East, died there. Her mother married again, the second husband being an engineer also, engaged upon the construction of eastern railways.

The girl was brought up at Beirut, in Syria, until she was 9 years old, in the care of native servants and in attendance at a school kept by nuns, who taught her to read and write in Arabic.

Being brought to France and placed under the care of an aunt who lived in Provence, she came under the observation of Colonel de Rochas, who, as one of the foremost investigators of psychological phenomena upon a scientific basis, had for years been engaged in the exposure of charlatans and in the study of varying phases of personality under the influence of hypnosis.

WENT OVER CHILDHOOD.

There were thirty seances in all. It was not until the seventh seance that complete exteriorization of the astral body was effected, and only in the fifteenth did Col. de Rochas feel justified in carrying the regression of her memory back to any previous existence.

Thus, Miss Mayo was taken back, in her condition of trance, gradually from 18 years of age to 16, to 14, to 12, to 10 years of age.

She saw her astral body transform itself in appearance corresponding with the altered age, and her memory revived countless facts which she had forgotten in her waking state.

BABY AGAIN.

At 8 years of age she was at Beirut, and could remember all her Turkish, which had slipped away from her during the years she had lived in France. At the age of 1 year her language failed her, and she could simply nod "yes" and "no."

Then she went into nothingness, feeling only that she existed. She was carried back still farther, when she said she was "all in the gray," and remembered having had some earlier existence.

HER PRECEDING EXISTENCE.

With the seventeenth seance the full facts of those earlier lives of hers which could be evoked began to appear. Back to the moment of her birth, back to that time before her birth; beyond that and—

"Where are you now?"

"I am a woman, she calls herself Lina."

"Are you living or dead?"

"I am dead."

"How did you die?"

WAS BRETON GIRL.

The tragedy of the girl's preceding existence was disclosed. The daughter of a fisherman in Brittany, she led the toilsome, hard life of the fisher child, yet was allowed to attend the parish schools long enough to learn how to read and write. As she grew into maidenhood she hoped for marriage, with the simple, natural desire and ambition natural to the young, innocent girl.

She was yet in her teens when the suitor she longed for came, a fisherman, like her father. His name was Yvon. She was married when she was

SOME CLEVER BURGLARS

BILL SIKES HAS BY NO MEANS GONE OUT OF BUSINESS.

He Has Marched With the Times, and Is Far More Cunning Than Ever.

The coolness and ingenuity of the modern burglar is, indeed, as wonderful as anything in fiction. Some little time ago a thief broke into a house in Wimbledon, England, in broad daylight. But a maid heard him, and found him busy pocking the contents of the plate-basket. He ran, and cutting across some open ground, came to the All-England tennis and croquet ground. He slipped through the hedge, and walked straight into the clubhouse, where he made for the dressing-room, and began to wash his hands as if nothing had happened.

His coolness was so superb that the attendant, taking him for a member's friend, suspected nothing. Having completed his toilet, the burglar coolly strolled out by the front door, walked to the gate, and departed.

A CONNOISSEUR IN CRIME.

To steal jewellery from the front of a brilliantly-lit shop-window which crowds of people are passing constantly is an idea which would only occur to a connoisseur in crime. Yet this is what actually happened at Erie, New York, one autumn afternoon a couple of years ago. A watch repairer at work within a yard of the show-case suddenly noticed that half the contents of the case had mysteriously disappeared. He gave the alarm, and investigation showed that the thief had gained access to the cellar under the shop, and then, mounting a pile of boxes, had drilled a hole in the cellar roof, cut out the bottom of the case, and quietly removed some $3,000 worth of booty. This man was never caught.

New ideas are valuable in every profession, and at least as much so in that of burglary as in any other. A few months ago a lady living in Stratford, England, went out for the afternoon, and soon after her departure a van drove up, and the man in charge told the servant that he had brought an ottoman. The maid said she thought there must be some mistake, but the vanman replied with a grin that it was a present, intended as a pleasant surprise, so the article was carried up to the best bed-room.

PROFITABLE FURNITURE.

An hour later the van returned, and the driver told the maid that the ottoman was intended for another house. So it was taken down again. It was not until the mistress returned that the discovery was made that all the jewellery and valuable silver in the house had accompanied it. The burglar had, of course, packed his booty inside the ottoman.

Another burglars' ruse was practised with success in Sheffield not long ago. Receiving an urgent telephone message late on a Saturday night, the Sheffield fire-engine was despatched to a large timber-yard in the suburbs. The alarm proved to be false, and, after inquiry, was shown to have come from a silver warehouse near the fire station. This the police promptly visited, and found the place ransacked. Some of the goods still lay about in sacks, which the thieves had not yet had time to remove. Evidently the burglars had reckoned on getting away with their plunder during the excitement caused by the turnout of the brigade.

SPECIAL PRECAUTIONS.

A gang of burglars who broke into the shop of a firm of wholesale jewellers in Holborn, and got away with over $5,000 worth of loot, took the most extraordinary precautions to avoid

THE CHANGING FASHIONS.

Why fashions come and go is still a mystery.

The Eton jacket was once colored, and the boys wore mortarboards. But on the death of King George III. black jackets were put on as mourning, and they have been worn since. In the same way came the black gowns of King's Counsel. On the death of Queen Mary II. black gowns were substituted for colored ones, and apparently the barristers forgot to discard their mourning.

In the days of public executions criminals often dressed in the most fashionable attire, and, as a consequence, the fashion was killed.

A certain judge thus destroyed a fashion he disliked by ordering the hangman to adopt it.

Painting is really a part of dress. Savages conceal their nakedness with paint; women try to improve their complexions or conceal wrinkles.

"The untimely decease" of more than one famous beauty," says Mr. Webb, "was attributed to the paint with which she besmeared her countenance, a notable instance being the death of Lady Coventry."

SHOCK FOR TEETOTALERS.

Analysis Showed as Much as Eight Per Cent. Alcohol in Soft Drinks.

Teetotalers have been roughly shocked by the publication of the British Government's analyses of so-called temperance drinks, which show an astonishing percentage of alcohol in certain favorite teetotal beverages. The liquor laws make drinks containing more than 2 per cent. of alcohol taxable as intoxicants, but of 4,117 samples of temperance drinks tested in the last four years no fewer than 3,008 exceeded the limit.

In a majority of cases the excess was slight, but in several of the samples as much as 8 per cent. of alcohol was found while in a few 9 and 10 per cent. was revealed. One sample of a mysterious decoction called dandelion stout contained 12.3 per cent.

The chief offending drinks were ginger beer and herb beer. Many samples of these were found to be as intoxicating as claret or hock, while others contained as much alcohol as beer. The temperance advocates were startled to learn that a child drinking a pint of some of the teetotal beverages consumes more alcohol than is contained in half a pint of champagne. It is admitted that the high percentage is accidental, and that it is due to fermentation in bottling.

CAT SAVED FAMILY FROM FLAMES.

A cat saved five persons from being burned to death in a fire at Roberts-dale, Ind., near Hammond. Flames broke out in the rear of the house of Herman Beisen while the family were asleep. The house cat was singled and in pain and terror the animal rushed to the upper floor and leaped on Beisen's bed. Beisen was badly scratched by the cat before he awakened. He speedily aroused the rest of the family, and all escaped, including the cat. The house was destroyed.

A man who would shoot another from ambush is mean enough to be the author of an anonymous letter.

sneos long enough to learn how to read and write. As she grew into maidenhood she hoped for marriage, with the simple, natural desire and ambition natural to the young, innocent girl.

She was yet in her teens when the sailor she longed for came, a fisherman, like her father. His name was Yvon. She was married when she was 20 years old; and then, indeed, she learned what life and love could be, and what sorrow could be.

The reincarnated fisher girl of the hypnotic trance—the girl who, as the guarded and sheltered young lady of this generation, was ignorant of the greatest fact of woman's life—passed through the pangs of childbirth, showed the happiness of the mother with her child, and showed the anguish of the mother when the child died, a baby only 2 years old.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

There were no other children, for Yvon, her husband, was drowned in a shipwreck. Lina, in wild despair, flung herself into the sea from one of the precipices of her native Brittany.

Before the eyes of Colonel de Rochas, M. Lacoste and her physician, Dr. Bertrand, the subject underwent afresh the agonies of her supposed suffocation until, in mercy to the living girl before them, the intensity of her re-enactment of the obscure tragedy under the waves of the Brittany coast had to be mitigated.

Again and again, Miss Mayo, hypnotized by Colonel de Rochas, rehearsed her life and death as Lina and her formless, peaceful existence "in the gray" until, impelled to reincarnation, she assumed the umorphous haze of a fresh astral body and descended upon her present mother, Mme de Mayo, some months before her new birth took place. But the life of Lina was only the beginning of her memory's regression.

Before that she was a man—treacherous, dissipated, cruel, blood-thirsty. For half a century she was Charles Mauville, clerk in a ministerial office in Paris. Time and again during his career the streets of Paris ran with blood, and heads were cut off in the public thoroughfares.

Mauville himself joined in the savageries, committing murders with his own hand, because he loved to kill. He lived out his petty, bloody life, hated by all who knew him well, until he sustained a chill at the age of 50 years, and died of pneumonia.

AT COURT OF LOUIS XIV.

But Mauville was not the ultimate stage of regression in Mile. Mayo's memory. She was in "the dark" for a long time previously, but before that had been Madeleine de Saint-Marc, wife of a gentleman attached to the court of Louis XIV.

A RUBY-LIGHT ANIMAL.

One of the most curious of all known phosphorescent larvae is found in British Guiana, near the Brazilian border, where it is known to the natives by the name macadoub. It is believed to be the larva of some beetle. A specimen was recently carried to England by Mr. C. W. Anderson, and exhibited, dead, at a meeting of the Linnean Society. When living the creature shows a ruby light in its head and a double row of phosphorescent spots along the body, two on each segment. The lights are not intermittent, but glow continuously.

PAPER TROUSERS NEXT.

A firm in Saxony has established a process by which they combine paper and cotton, and make it into a serviceable cloth. Paper and cotton and paper and wool are so combined that suits, jackets, shirts and many other articles of dress wear are now being produced. Sufficient xylonin, as it is called, to produce a complete plain suit costs from two to three dollars.

on getting away with their plunder during the excitement caused by the turnout of the brigade.

SPECIAL PRECAUTIONS.

A gang of burglars who broke into the shop of a firm of wholesale jewellers in Holborn, and got away with over $5,000 worth of loot, took the most extraordinary precautions to avoid leaving any traces or being disturbed while at work. They began by breaking into a lady's dressing-room and stealing several pairs of gloves, which they wore while at work in order to leave no finger-prints. They then muffled the telephone-receiver with silver paper, after which they carried the show-cases into the back premises, and there went through them leisurely, being careful to take only gold and silver, and to reject all plated articles. They then made a meal of food found on the premises, but carefully washed the plates to avoid the danger of being traced by finger-prints.

In Vienna a year ago an artist in crime committed an audacious theft. A handsome gale and pining of hammered iron and copper had just been erected round the garden of a new villa in the Thirteenth District, when, late in the evening, a cart with several workmen drove up, roused the watchman, and grumblingly informed him that they had been sent to take away the gate and pining. They insisted on his helping them with the job, and, under the eyes of a policeman, spent three hours getting the fence up and loading it in the cart. About midnight they drove away. In the morning, when the real workmen arrived, they were simply paralyzed with astonishment, and the disgust of the policeman may be imagined when he found that he had been watching three thieves carry away their booty under his very nose.—London Answers.

TO CURE LONDON'S INSANE.

English Doctor Gives $150,000 to Establish Hospital for Mental Disease.

A gift of £30,000, offered by Dr. Henry Maudsley, of Mayfair, London, the well-known specialist in mental disease, towards the establishment of a hospital for the treatment of mental diseases, was recently accepted by the Council, which passed a resolution of thanks to Dr. Maudsley.

Dr. Maudsley stated in an interview that he had offered the money so that London might have a hospital which could be devoted to three special uses:

1. The early treatment of insanity and mental diseases, to prevent, if possible, the necessity of sending cases to asylums.
2. Research work into the cause and prevention of insanity.
3. Educational work; a medical school for the training of students in the treatment of insanity.

"The hospital will not be an asylum," said the doctor. "Incurable cases will be transferred to one of the county asylums. Insanity can often be cured in its early stages by special and individual attention, which cannot be properly given in a great asylum with a thousand and more patients. There will only be accommodation for 100 patients in the new hospital, so that each case can be separately treated. The stigma of a lunatic asylum will not, in any way, rest upon patients who have been in the hospital. It will be simply an ordinary hospital where insanity will receive medical attention, just as other diseases are treated in general hospitals.

"We know now that insanity is caused by toxins, or poisons in the blood, and efforts will be made to discover antitoxins for types of insanity."

Horses attached to an ambulance carrying an injured man, ran away in a Belfast street, colliding with a lamp-post, and throwing the driver from his seat. The invalid was taken in a van to the hospital, but died almost immediately.

Martin Higgins, a Kilmeadim, county Waterford, laborer, has been convicted for trial on a charge of manslaughter. While engaged in a drunken brawl with another laborer named Murray, he inflicted wounds which ultimately proved fatal.

A farmer named John O'Hare, Ballylough, obtained in the Newry market the sum of £2 for 80 stones of flax, which was raised from two bushels of seed that cost £1. His working expenses cost him £11, leaving him a net gain of £20.

The Derry Port and Harbor Commissioners have passed a resolution asking the Government to give a free grant of $350,000 towards building a graving dock at Derry, the commissioners to add $150,000, making a total of $500,000 for the project.

The father of a large family having died of consumption in a house near Newry, the cottage became infested with the germs. Five children died in rapid succession, and two more are sick of the same disease. The family is too poor to move from the house.

Drummer Michael Regan, of the 5th Battalion Connaught Rangers Militia, was discharged under the provisions of the new army order, after completing a service of forty-one years and 106 days. There was never the slightest record against him.

On the 1st inst., a large grass farm belonging to Michael Flynn, of Cragmore, Ballinast, Co. County Roscommon, was cleared of cattle and stock, which included a large number of sheep. They were being driven in the public road when the police arrived on the scene, and the riders made off.

Kate Wilson, a nurse, was charged in the Dublin Police Court with infanticide, it being claimed that she had willfully neglected Louisa Smith, an eight-months' baby, so as to cause her death. Elizabeth Simpfitt, a friend of the mother of the child, had placed it in the woman Wilson's care, paying 50c a week for it.

FLEAS AND THE PLAGUE.

It has long been known that rats are an important cause of the spread of plague, but more recent researches seem to indicate that fleas serve as an intermediate link in conveying the disease from rats to men. According to the observations and experiments of Simand, infection of plague from one human being to another takes place, but in an insignificant number of cases compared with those where fleas carry the infection from rat to man. The recent experiments of the plague commission at Bombay have established the fact that fleas convey the plague from infected to healthy rats, and it has also been shown that the species of flea concerned is always found in plague-infected houses. Medical science therefore declares war upon fleas as upon mosquitoes, and the mystery of epidemics is proportionately cleared up. Yet much remains to be learned.

Mr. Zan Smith has not been seen since Saturday evening about 10-30, when he was seen near the river below the Power House. His non-appearance on Monday alarmed his friends and relatives and an active search has been made for him since Monday but without avail. Grave fears are entertained that he may have fallen into the river or canal and been drowned. On Thursday Mr. J. F. Smith had a number of men searching the river and canal, and any news of his brother will be thankfully received by Mr. J. F. Smith.

Orchestra Benefit One Big Success.

Professor Stevens' benefit concert for the new symphony orchestra of 29 pieces, which is to be organized on the lines of the large orchestra in Boston and Pittsburgh, was held one night last week at one of the London theatres, and was a huge success, both financially and artistically. This orchestra will be a credit to both the men of which it is composed and also to Londoners at large. "I feel it my duty to testify to the benefit I have received from the use of Psychine. While travelling in New Ontario conducting special meetings I contracted a very bad cold, which gradually developed into Bronchitis of the worst form. I was advised to try Psychine, which I did, and after using but a few bottles I was completely restored to health. I recommend this wonderful remedy to sufferers from Bronchitis and other troubles."

Later: "I wish to add that my voice, since using Psychine, is stronger and has much more carrying power than it had before I had bronchitis, and the vocal chords do not tire with speaking."

A quarrel between neighbors at South Napanee was aired in the Police Court on Thursday evening of last week. Mrs. Ida Wagar was before the Police Magistrate upon two charges, one preferred by Mrs. Nellie Wagar of using abusive language, and one brought by Mrs. M. J. Sedore of assault. Mrs. Ida Wagar was found guilty on both charges and liberated to appear on Saturday to receive sentence and find sureties for her good behavior. When the case was called on Saturday morning Mrs. Wagar did not appear, and upon inquiry it was found that she had left for parts unknown the previous evening.

Welcome as the genial April shower, is the issue of the Busy Man's Magazine for the current month. It is one of the brightest and most attractive of Canadian publications, replete with good stories and crisp, to-the-point, reading matter on subjects which concern and appeal to busy men. In addition to several short breezy sketches of leading Canadians and men of affairs, racy and instructive articles will be found on several timely topics. Among the most acceptable contributions from talented writers are: "The Early Struggles of Canada's Rugged Pioneers," "Co-operation and some of its Beneficial Results," "The American Invasion of Canada," "Another Band of Steel Across the Continent," "The Place Where Your Money is Made,"
"How a Wife is Kept in the Background," "How Young Married Folk Should Finance," "The Humanity of the Canadian Indian," "Lively Reminiscences of the Backwoods," "The Greatest Inventor in the World," etc.
The April "Busy Man's" is well worth buying and well worth reading. The illustrations are numerous and give the issue a decidedly inviting appearance.
